Washington Dances To Honor Roosevelt And Fight Paralysis

Starstruck Capital Attends Six Balls; First Lady Cuts Gargantuan Cake

(Other stories and pictures on Pages 3 and 8.)

By Bill Brinkley
Post Staff Writer

Wartime Washington, with the aid of a whole Milky Way of Hollywood stars, last night honored President Roosevelt on his sixtieth birthday and helped a cause near to his heart by dancing and dining that others might walk.

Twenty-three of moviedom's bright names supplied the glamour that filled half a dozen halls for dancing and three theaters besides—to the benefit of the battle against infantile paralysis. At one of these halls—Uline's Arena—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt drew a sharp knife through a gargantuan Presidential birthday cake.

Surrounded by movie stars who interrupted their evening's tour of dances to witness the broadcast in the White House, President Roosevelt gave his thanks to Americans at 12,540 parties throughout the country for their help "in lifting some of the clouds of unhappiness and anxiety" in a strife-stricken world.

Proves We'll Win War

He said the fact that America could look after the health of its people while engaged in war meant that the United States definitely expected to win through to a sound peace.

"Our enemies must wonder," the President said, "how we are finding time during the grim business of war to work for the cause of little children. We support our tasks of humanity in time of war as in time of peace."

The President said he had been authorized by the trustees of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to make a special announcement that county chapters may use part of this year's funds to give special assistance to the children of soldiers, sailors and marines who may fall victim to the disease.

The official celebration here last night to celebrate the birthday of the most famous person to overcome the handicap of infantile paralysis and to raise money to help other victims of the dread disease began at the Willard Hotel in the minutes before 6 o'clock.

At that time members of the Hollywood contingent began arriving for the District Commissioners' reception and dinner in their honor.

It was one of the most star-studded affairs in the Willard's annals.

After elbowing with lovers of the

MacArthur's Men Send President Birthday Greeting

The tired, embattled men of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Philippines Army, grimly preparing for certain fresh onslaughts of numerically superior Japanese troops, artillery and planes, yesterday remembered the birthday of their Commander in Chief.

Army Communique No. 84 announced that Gen. MacArthur had sent the following message to President Roosevelt:

"Today, January 30, the anniversary of your birth, smoke-begrimed men, bearing the marks of battle, rise from the fox holes of Bataan and the batteries of Corregidor to pray fervently that God may bless immeasurably the President of the United States."

80,000 Here Still Need Car Stamps

The Washington Postoffice and its branches last night prepared for a two-day rush as sale figures showed nearly 80,000 District motorists are without their Federal automobile use tax stamps.

The deadline is midnight Sunday, and drivers using cars without stamps after that hour will be subject to a $25 fine or a month in jail or both. Sales yesterday totaled 138,865.

To accommodate all the late purchasers all branches of the postoffice will be open until 9 p. m. today, and the main postoffice and the Benjamin Franklin Station will be open all night and tomorrow.

But I Don't LIKE It . . .

A SHY, MAN'S MAN—Gerry King, 4-year-old boy recovering from infantile paralysis, came here from New York's Hell's Kitchen to help celebrate the President's Birthday, but didn't like it when Dorothy Lamour asked for a kiss. Said Gerry, "I don't want that red stuff on me." He did, however, allow the star to kiss him, but responded to Miss Lamour by giving her a poke in the nose

President's Talk

Faith, Hope, Charity Still Rule World

The following is the text of President Roosevelt's radio address to those celebrating his sixtieth birthday:

To all of you who are making tonight's celebrations such a success, I want to say—very simply—thank you.

In the midst of world tragedy—in the midst of sorrow, suffering, destruction and death—it is natural for most of us to say even on a birthday or a feast day: "Isn't the word 'happy' a bit out of place just now?"

That was perhaps my own predominant thought this morning. Yet the day itself and the evening have brought with them a great reassurance which comes from the deep knowledge that most of this world is still ruled by the spirit of faith, and hope and charity.

Even in time of war those nations which still hold to the old ideals of Christianity and democracy are carrying on services to humanity which have little or no relationship to torpedoes or guns or bombs. That means very definitely that we have an abiding faith in the future—a definite expectancy that we are going to win through to a peace which will bring with it continuing progress and substantial success in our efforts for the security and not for the destruction of humanity.

Cause of Little Children

Our enemies must at this moment be wondering—if they are permitted to know what goes on—how we are finding the time during the grim business of war to work for the cause of little children. For, under the enemies'

Price Control Act 'Workable,' Roosevelt Says

Signs Compromise Law as 'Useful,' but Warns of Farm Clause

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday signed a price control bill which he characterized as worth having and "workable" as a whole, but not so good in its limitations on fixing the price of agricultural commodities.

The law, whose legislative history has been among the most controversial and troubled in this session of Congress, for the first time gives the war administration teeth to enforce violations of its price-fixing edicts.

The Chief Executive characterized it as "an important weapon in our armory against the onslaught of the Axis powers," explaining that "nothing could better serve the purposes of our enemies than that we should become the victims of inflation."

Questions "Certain Sections"

He warned, however, that passage of the legislation does not mean that the battle against inflation has been won, and, in obvious reference to the sections forbidding the fixing of price ceilings below 110 per cent of parity, declared:

"I have doubts as to the wisdom and adequacy of certain sections of the act."

At his press conference, when he announced that he had signed the measure, Mr. Roosevelt warned that he would not hesitate again to challenge the powerful farm bloc and to ask Congress for amendments if they were found necessary.

He told reporters that the bill was worth having as another valuable tool taken in conjunction with

'Get Out of Town!'

Pick Your Parasite! A Game for All

ALWAYS noted for fearless journalism, The Post reaches a new high, or something, today by announcing its overnight creation—a Parasite Department.

Going Defense Housing Coordinator Charles Palmer one better, President Roosevelt yesterday suggested at his press conference (see page 12) that all parasites get out of Washington to make room for defense workers.

Mr. Roosevelt did not define a parasite beyond a few generalities. He left that task for the press.

The Post was in gear to undertake this responsibility in no time.

The approved technique in such situations is to appoint a committee and a publicity director. This was done.

The Secret Six, as the committee will be known, will pass on all Parasites. The committee is secret because The Post does not want this project to give anyone any comfort, including the enemy. But for John L. Lewis' information it has labor representation and Harry Hopkins will be glad to know it includes a professor and a social worker. The man in the balcony who guessed Jesse Jones is a member is very hot. Jones is on everything.

THE publicity director is a playwright and esthete, following the approved pattern. He has instructions to do anything except promote the chairman by picturing him riding his secretary to work on a bicycle. This Parasite business is serious and there can be no horse-play. There will be no square dances on the roof at noontime.

The publicity director got on the telephone immediately and took a poll of a scientific cross-section of Washington.

The Post could announce right now that the poll showed everybody in Washington thinks everybody else is a Parasite.

But that is no way to conduct a proper investigation. There have got to be hearings and star chamber sessions. The last cent of the appropriation has got to be spent if it bores everyone stiff. A report must be made featuring the most sensational and least important phases of this great question.

TO give the customers an idea of what is coming, here are some excerpts from the reports of our operatives last night:

SOCIAL LEADER—"So now I am a Parasite, am I? After eight years of feeding young, lisping New Dealers until I am bustle-bound myself. I wish I had my anchovies back. Harold Ickes is back of this!"

RETIRED GENERAL—"I must stay here to see that this nonsense about the Army and Navy cooperating is pigeon-holed. It is highly irregular!"

RETIRED ADMIRAL—"I agree with my colleague."

TAXI DRIVER—"As I get it they want room for more clerks to do the work the clerks they have got ain't doing."

LAWYER—"This will give me a chance to run a few people I don't like out of town, including the chef who puts parsley around roasts and pants on lamb chops."

POLICEMAN—"I don't know anything about these Termites, but I do want to be on the detail that sees to it that the girls are put to bed at 10 o'clock every night."

TAXPAYER—"It don't make any difference to me, brother. My number is up any way you figure it."

THIS will give you an idea.

Now The Post wants expression from readers.

Send in names of Parasites you would like run out of town.

The Post will use all names—to hell with the libel laws.

Suspected Parasites will be called before the committee and roundly abused.

When we get through Comrade Stalin's face will be red 'way up to here . . . the piker.

We will show you a purge that is a purge!

California, here they come!

11 P. M. Girl Curfew Proposed So They Won't Primp on Job

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Representative Wilson (Republican), of Indiana, said last night he may introduce legislation in the House setting an 11 p. m. curfew for women Government employes in the District in order to improve their efficiency during working hours.

Announcement of his probable action followed a hearing of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee at which he declared in effect that lack of sufficient sleep on the part of Government girls is retarding the efficiency of the war effort.

A nightly curfew might send the women to work the next morning "with breakfast, and their make-up on," he said.

"As it is, a good many of the girls come to work pretty sleepy and without breakfast. They go to the rest room for an hour to put their make-up on. Then it's nearly time to go to lunch. As a result they get about four hours of work done."

The Curfew Blues

He criticized overstaffing of offices, saying he had been informed that many supervisors are attempting to get as many employes as possible in their offices, believing it adds to their prestige.

Beautiful but Modest Girls Eager for Date With Plebe

Dear Lonely Plebe:

So you want The Post to send you the address of the most beautiful girl in Washington? Because March 7-8 is the one weekend when plebes are allowed to escort female guests to the dances at Annapolis and you haven't got anybody to "drag?"

That's what you said in your letter to The Post, isn't it? Well, you're due for a disappointment, because Washington girls are very modest creatures, and it's hard to find one who'll even admit she's pretty, to say nothing of putting the finger on one with the gall to proclaim herself the Capital's queen.

However, herewith is a trio of State Department stenographers to choose from, and you're a choosy chump if they don't interest you.

The names, ages and addresses are Rachel Sbarra, 21, 2152 F Street Northwest; Frances Gemeny, 18, 2923 M Street Southeast, and Jeanne Rollison, 19, 1627 Nineteenth Street Northwest. Their phone numbers are available on request.

Another U. S. Tanker Sunk Off East Coast; Survivors Rescued

Rochester, 13th Victim of Subs; Crewmen Are Slated to Be Landed at Norfolk

Another American tanker has been torpedoed off the Atlantic Coast, the Navy Department announced yesterday, while the Pan Maine, thought earlier a U-boat victim, has arrived safely in port.

Torpedoed ship was the Socony-Vacuum tanker Rochester, the sixteenth Allied vessel to be attacked off the East Coast. She was the eighth tanker and the thirteenth vessel to be sunk.

While the Navy announcement did not say the Rochester went down, it said survivors, who abandoned ship five minutes after she was struck, have been picked up. They were to have been landed at Norfolk, Va., about midnight last night. The Navy's announcement also referred to the vessel in the past tense.

The Rochester displaced 6836 gross tons and was 435½ feet long and 56 feet 2 inches at the beam. She was built in 1920 at Sparrows Point, Md., and her home port was New York City.

The Pan Maine, owned by the Pan American Petroleum & Transport Co., is of 7236 tons.

At Boston last night, the First Naval District indicated the Pan Maine had been saved from an actual attack by an enemy U-boat by an Atlantic storm. "The ship," said the naval announcement, "had been previously reported attacked but it develops that this was not so, the premature report from the ship being due to the fact that a periscope sighted by Second Mate Melvin Hayes, of Baltimore, and John Larnowicz, of South River, N. J., both former Navy men, was so close that an attack was anticipated. Periscope lost sight of after 5 min-

Five Billions Added to Navy Bill for Planes

Increase Is Expected To Provide Force Of 25,000 Aircraft

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

A Senate Appropriations subcommittee yesterday added six and one-half billion dollars to the biggest appropriation bill in history, the greater part of the increase to be used for expansion of Naval air power.

Exact figures on future production in the Navy's drive for air supremacy were not available, but a usually reliable source said that $5,072,300,000 added to the bill by the subcommittee, at the request of President Roosevelt, would build and arm nearly 25,000 aircraft.

This sum would supplement $1,316,313,000 already appropriated by Congress for expenditure on Naval aircraft in 1942. It is in addition to the $1,435,981,470 carried in the bill as it passed the House Tuesday, which is to be spent for airplane procurement in the fiscal year 1943.

The grand total of the bill which the subcommittee will report to the full Appropriations Committee today is $26,494,265,474, including contract authorizations.

Expands Lend-Lease

The cash and contract authority total of the House bill was $19,977,965,474.

Aside from boosting proposed Navy expenditures, the subcommittee accepted an amendment to the bill, suggested by President Roosevelt, which would empower him to transfer to any foreign nation whose defense he "deems vital to the defense of the United States" any Navy ships constructed under all naval appropriations since March 11, 1941.

The President asked the subcommittee to grant his Secretary of the Navy authority to sell, lease or lend such ships as well as any other defense articles. The proposed amendment was modified to restrict the

For Treachery

Hitler Lauds Jap Attack; He's Grateful

By the Associated Press

Berlin (from German broadcasts), Jan. 30.—Adolf Hitler acknowledged to his people today that he could not promise an end to the war this year, but declared Japan's surprise attack upon the United States "has greatly relieved our situation."

Speaking for this first time since his declaration of war upon the United States, Hitler blamed the weather instead of the Russians for Nazi reverses on the Eastern Front and promise 1942 "will again be a year of great victories."

"Countries which have nothing now are united," he said. "We shall see who wins this war—those who have nothing to lose and everything to win or those who have everything to lose and nothing to gain.

"I do not know if the war will end this year, but one thing I do know: Wherever the enemy will come up against us he will be beaten."

Hitler congratulated Japan for the "way she followed our example and struck first" and added that "now Britain and the United States will need convoys on all oceans and they will see what our U-boats may achieve."

Talks of "His Duty"

He declared Germany's number of submarines has been enormously increased and would be a big factor in the world-wide conflict.

Not the Red army but 45-degree frost forced the German army to abandon the offensive on the Eastern Front, he asserted, claiming German lines now have been stabilized.

He dismissed the gains of the Russian counteroffensive as "advances of a few kilometers at some places, made at a cost of great amounts of material and lives."

"But in a few weeks," he went on, "winter will break in the south and the ice will melt and the hour will come when the ground will be

Filipinos Unimpressed

MacArthur's Men Laugh At Foe's 'Honorable' Leaflets

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

A Japanese demand that he surrender because "you are doomed" has been ignored by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, whose weary men "rose from the foxholes of Bataan" in salute to President Roosevelt yesterday, then settled back to await the fury of another Jap assault.

The demand for surrender, a War Department communique said, first was dropped by airplanes January 10. Jap planes now are dropping the same message again, 20 days later, with a message to the Filipino contingent of the defending army printed on the back.

In those 20 days, the Japanese have launched five attacks on MacArthur's lines, clawing at both flanks and the center. Five times they have been beaten back, leaving hundreds of their dead piled before the American-Filipino fire.

Their appeal to the Filipinos, MacArthur reported, "occasioned much mirth" among them and they are "continuing their resistance with loyalty, courage and resolution."

After 24 hours of comparative quiet on the Bataan front, with almost no enemy planes in the air, the defenders were preparing yesterday for a renewal of the assaults which have hammered at them for so long. Fresh Japanese troops

Rising Crescendo

By Harold Guard
United Press Staff Writer

Singapore, Jan. 30.—The spearhead of a Japanese army estimated at 120,000 men drove to within 18 miles of Singapore tonight, and the crash of bombs and rumble of distant artillery signaled the approach of one of the decisive battles of the Pacific war.

Japanese air raiders returned again tonight through murky skies, after two attacks earlier in the day, scattering bombs indiscriminately among the civilian population. The people were settling down, with amazing calm, under curfew and blackout regulations, to withstand a siege.

The roar of guns from the battle line across the lower tip of the Malaya mainland was incessant. At the time today's communique was issued the Japanese were at Kulai, 18 miles up the Central Malaya railway from Singapore, and they apparently were still driving ahead. The Japanese flanks were 20 miles up the west Malaya coast from Singapore and 38 miles up the east coast. They, too, were rolling on south. Only a dauntless but vastly outnumbered band of Imperial troops and the mile-wide Strait of Johore stood between the advancing army and this greatest naval base in the Far East.

Vehicles on Move

The southern tip of Johore province seethed with activity. Once luxurious limousines, commandeered, camouflaged, plastered with mud bearing the signs "Army Vehicle No.——" sped along the military roads. In the crush of southbound traffic there were tractors and steam rollers I had seen in the Slim River area, 230 miles north of here. They had come all the way

3 Guests or More, And Navy Officers Must Don Uniform

Before you go to visit a Navy officer friend, you'd better call him up and find out if anybody is there ahead of you.

If your arrival makes three guests present, he will have to get up, if he's in civilian clothes, and change to uniform. Apparently on the theory that three's a crowd, Secretary of the Navy Knox yesterday issued an order that naval officers must wear the "uniform of the day" at all times, except at home when "less than three guests are present."

Officers also are exempted from wearing the uniform when exercising. Presumably they do not have to sleep in uniform, though the order does not say so.

War Sidelights

Nazis Use Aliens to Fill Labor Needs

London, Jan. 30 (AP).—Adolf Hitler has put more than 2,000,000 alien men and women into German war industries in an effort to overcome his enormous losses in Russia, Norwegian circles said tonight.

Their figures tallied with an official German broadcast from Berlin announcing that 2,140,000 aliens and 1,500,000 "prisoners of war" were working under German orders.

"Hitler has transferred many war factory workers to the army," these Norwegians said, "is calling up 200,000 more German women, and also recalling men who had reached pension ages."

'Best Laid Plans—'

London, Jan. 30 (AP).—The Nazi-controlled Netherlands press has revealed that the Germans plan to exploit west Russia by hiring Dutch, Belgian, Danish and other farmers from Nazi-occupied countries as managers over Russian laborers, the profits to go to the German "East German Agricultural Co."

Aneta, Netherlands news agency, which received the papers today, said that part of the land included in the plan has been lost in the Nazi retreat.

East Indies Reinforced

Batavia, N. E. I., Jan. 30 (AP).—Reinforcements in both materials and men already have arrived in the Netherlands East Indies.

Details of the reinforcements are military secrets. However, inhabitants of Batavia now are seeing low-flying United States bombers, which tell them that the Japanese also are seeing them, but in deadly fashion.

Gestapo Behind Sabotage

Capetown, Union of South Africa, Jan. 30 (AP).—Gestapo agents, with headquarters at Lourenco Marques, Portuguese East Africa, are behind the wave of sabotage in South Africa, H. G. Lawrence, minister of the interior, told the Senate today.

have reached the front, MacArthur reported, and "movements behind the line indicate preparations by the enemy for the resumption of a large-scale offensive."

The Japanese propaganda barrage, which proved as unsuccessful as other attacks on the Bataan line, appealed January 10 to MacArthur's "wise council" to "save the lives of your troops." Its sequel, the messages to the Filipino soldiers printed on the back of the appeal to MacArthur, termed their leader "stupid" and "blind."

In Hawaii, Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, Army commander, reported that more than half of the men wounded in the Japanese attack of December 7 have recovered and returned to duty. Of 428 wounded, he reported, 230 are recovered.

Army Communique No. 84

Following is a partial text of the War Department communique issued yesterday as of 9:30 a. m.:

Philippine theater: Fighting on the Bataan Peninsula was light during the past 24 hours. There was practically no enemy air activity.

The arrival of fresh Japanese troops at the front and movements behind the line indicate preparations by the enemy for the resumption of a large-scale offensive.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

Army Communique No. 85

Full text of the War Department communique issued yesterday as of 4 p. m., follows:

Philippine Theater: On January 10, 1942, Japanese airplanes dropped leaflets over our lines in the Philippines bearing the following message:

"To Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Commander in Chief, United States Army Forces in the Far East.

"Sir:

"You are well aware that you are doomed. The end is near. The question is how long you will be able to resist. You have already cut rations by half. I appreciate the fighting spirit of yourself and your troops who have been fighting with courage. Your prestige and honor have been upheld.

"However, in order to avoid needless bloodshed and to save your First, Thirty-first Divisions, and the remnants of other division, together with your auxiliary troops, you are advised to surrender. In the meantime we shall continue our offensive as I do not wish to give you time for defense. If you decide to comply with our advice send a mission as soon as possible to our front line. We shall then cease firing and negotiate an armistice. Failing that our offensive will be continued with inexorable force which will bring upon you only disaster.

"Hoping your wise counsel will so prevail that you will save the lives of your troops, I remain,

"Yours very sincerely,

"Commander in Chief, the Japanese Expeditionary Forces."

Gen. MacArthur and his troops paid no attention to the message.

Enemy airplanes are now redistributing this leaflet, on the back of which has been added the following message, directed especially to the Filipino troops:

"To the Filipino soldiers:

"The outcome of the present combat has been already decided and you are cornered to the doom. At this time ever generous commander in chief of Japanese expeditionary forces in order to avoid further annihilation of your dear lives has presented to your commander in chief, Gen. MacArthur, a letter as shown on the back page of this leaflet. But, however, being unable to realize the present situation, blinded Gen. MacArthur has stupidly refused our proposal and continues futile struggle at the cost of your precious lives.

"Dear Filiino soldiers there are still one way left for you. That is to give up all your weapons at once and surrender to the Japanese forces before it is too late, then we shall fully protect you. We repeat the last. Surrender at once and build your new Philippines for and by Filipinos.

"Commander in Chief of the Japanese Expeditionary Forces."

This message has occasioned much mirth among the Filipino soldiers, who are continuing their resistance with loyalty, courage and resolution.

Hawaii: The Commanding General, Hawaiian Department, reports that more than half of those wounded in the Japanese attack of December 7, 1941, have fully recovered and have returned to duty. The total number wounded was 428. Of those 230 are now back on duty.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

Master Stalin Plan Aims to Hurl Nazis Out of Russia in 1942

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Jan. 30.—In firm possession of the railway gate to both the Ukraine granary and the Donets coal basin, the Red army was reported officially tonight to have outflanked, outknifed and encircled the German enemy in scores of sectors on a master Stalin plan of throwing the Germans from every acre of Russian soil in 1942.

Huge German forces were in danger of entrapment in the center, north and south of the active front. Prong-like Soviet drives were aimed at many objectives, catching the Nazis between the forks and leaving them the choice of being destroyed, captured or retreating with such speed that they lose much valued equipment.

In trying to pursue the latter course, the Germans met swift charges behind their lines by skilled Siberian ski troops which interrupted the best laid Nazi plans.

Pursuit Continues

The midnight communique said numerous additional populated places fell into Russian hands during the day, and listed 2500 Germans killed in the liberation of Sukhinichi, big railway junction in the Kirov zone 150 miles southwest of Moscow.

"Pursuit of fleeing remnants of the beaten enemy there continues," the announcement added.

The new Red army offensives are based on a considerable element of surprise aided by deft scouting in moth-like Soviet planes which operate in the worst kind of weather.

At the front one sees these little fellows equipped with skis. The Russians seem able to land them almost anywhere; to fly them in blizzards and gales. They nose out the enemy's weak spots, locating breaks and movements and quickly reporting back. The ski troops who then knife into action are so mobile that the Russians are able to fling them across whole sectors at the shortest warning.

Moscow Made Happy

In Moscow tonight there were many beaming faces as loud speakers boomed out the details of Marshal Timoshenko's thrust into the Ukraine, which has carried him within 70 miles of the lower Dieper's big bend and menaced German lines all the way south to the Sea of Azavo and of the tightening of the great Russian pincers on pivotal Smolensk from north and south.

If one turned the dial one heard the Nazi radio, flooding Europe with hysterical broadcasts in many languages, warning the people "what a Russian conquest would mean."

No German broadcast mentioned, however, how a surprise attack by Maj. Gen. Grechko took Barenkova in the advance toward the Dniper.

Moscow papers held their presses to tell the story of the taking of Lozovaya, the Ukraine-Donets railway gate. The Germans had paid especial attention to the city, making it a front supply station, and establishing a warehouse for the Seventeenth German Army.

Rail Junction Encircled

Typical of the way the Germans are being surrounded on the central front was the big railway junction of Sukhinichi.

The Russians encircled the suburbs and gradually pressing closer defeated several counter-attacks. The Nazis, finding their situation hopeless, withdrew from the city proper. But the Russians refused to make a frontal attack. Instead, they drew their iron ring tighter. The Germans tried to bring up reinforcements from the Briansk area, but they, too, were hemmed in. Finally the Nazis tried to sneak out in small groups after damaging their equipment. Some got out but the Russians killed many more in the city, where the Smolensk-Briansk and Tulakaluga railways cross.

120,000 Japs Push On Singapore as Showdown Battle Draws Near

under their own power. The steam rollers averaged 9 miles a day and the crews had to stop every 4 miles and chop wood for fuel.

Nowhere on the Singapore Island or Johore sides of the strait, did I find any sign of panic. There was evidence of a desperate determination to fight a delaying action, to allow time for promised reinforcements to arrive.

There are already some newcomers near the front. They are betrayed by the lightness of their skin. The Malayan army's sole uniform nowadays consists of a pair of the shortest kind of shorts and soldiers who wear them quickly acquire a deep bronze. There were soldiers bathing at roadside wells today who weren't bronzed.

Japanese are meeting plenty of opposition from R. A. F. fighters, both over Singapore and at the front.

(The Berlin radio said Japanese were raiding Singapore "incessantly" and and "destroyed" the naval base, the naval arsenal, and a 15,000-ton dock. The same source reported that all air bases in Malaya were in Japanese hands except one in southern Johore and four on Singapore Island, all of which had been "heavily damaged by continuous raids.")

The one cheering note was the announcement that another thousand British imperial troops previously cut off in the Batu Pahat section of western Malaya had been able to beat back and rejoin the main British forces.

Singapore's antiaircraft batteries shot down two enemy planes yesterday, and in enemy raids again this morning one Japanese plane was destroyed and several others damaged.

Barrier Hurdled, Says Tokyo

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—A Tokyo broadcast said tonight that Japanese forces "hurdled the last barrier" before Johore Bahru, by breaking through at Kulai, 18 miles north of Singapore.

The broadcast, heard by CBS, said "from Kulai Japanese forces are now streaming toward Singapore over a wide highway running parallel to the railroad leading to the Johore Bahru station.

Johore Sultan Joins Japs, They Assert

Tokyo, Jan. 30 (Radiocast Recorded by U. P.)—The Sultan of Johore and all other native rulers of the federated and nonfederated Malay states now "are under the protection of Japanese troops and are closely cooperating with the Japanese military in reorganization of Malaya," the Domei News Agency reported today.

Sultan Ibrahim of Johore sought Japanese protection after the Japanese occupation of the city of Kluang, Domei said.

Ramsay McDonald's Daughter Injured

London, Jan. 30 (AP).—Sheila MacDonald suffered a fractured skull and other injuries in an automobile accident at Wimbledon early today.

Miss MacDonald, sister of Malcolm MacDonald, Britain's high commissioner to Canada, and daughter of the late Ramsay MacDonald, was taken to a hospital, where her condition was reported as serious.

Thousands of Greetings Pour Into White House on President's 60th Birthday

Nation's Chief Spends Busy Anniversary

President Roosevelt sets forth upon his sixty-first year today, after spending what was probably the busiest and most momentous birthday anniversary of his life.

Throughout yesterday and last night thousands of greetings poured in at the White House from crowned heads and just plain people from the far corners of the earth and from the length and breadth of the land.

He took time out yesterday at noon from the task of directing a grimly united Nation in its greatest life-and-death struggle to lunch with a galaxy of motion picture stars here to attend the Capital's various birthday celebrations. And although there was probably a million dollars' worth of glamour there, the show was stolen by a 4-year-old infantile paralysis victim from New York's Hell's Kitchen.

He was little Gerry King, who came here with his mother, Mrs. Arthur King, at invitation of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Gerry, walking on crutches, presented the President with a shiny toy aircraft carrier, a gift from the children in Gerry's block back home. The youngster was dressed in a blue sailor suit.

"Happy birthday, Mr. President," he piped.

Socks Glamour Girl

Gerry was the center of attraction and Dorothy Lamour kissed him smack on the cheek. But Gerry didn't relish it. He whipped a left jab to the actress' shapely nose.

"I don't want that red stuff on me," he said, wiping the lipstick from his face.

He left the White House with a White House gift and autographs from all the stars.

The White House luncheon was sandwiched in between an impressive list of business callers. They included Chinese Foreign Minister T. V. Soong, Netherlands Minister A. Loudon and De. Eelco Van Kleffens, Dutch Foreign Minister, and officials who attended the President's regular Friday Cabinet meeting.

Meantime, birthday wishes continued to pour in, including a most unusual and touching greeting and prayer from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's fighting men in the Philippines. The message, sent by MacArthur, said:

"Today, January 30, the anniversary of your birthday, smoke-begrimed men, covered with the marks of battle, rise from the fox holes of Bataan and the batteries of Corregidor to pray fervently that God may bless immeasurably the President of the United States."

Tribute From House:

At the Capitol, members of the House were turning their session into one of tribute to him. The President read a message from Democratic Leader McCormack calling him "one of the great men of all times." From the Republican side came a message from Representative Jenkins of Ohio, declaring, "We must march solidly, honestly and fearlessly behind the President." And evidence further of national unity, came in a message from Representative Cox of Georgia, bitter foe of the President in former days . . . "I urge all members of Congress to pledge to him our confidence, our devotion and our loyalty."

Representative Hamilton Fish, a former isolationist, declared the American people "form a united front behind the leadership of their great President," and asserted that all his colleagues in the House are firmly behind their Commander in Chief.

From the King of England and Prime Minister Churchill came greetings in a transatlantic broadcast featuring representatives of all countries fighting against the Axis powers. Peoples of all the countries crushed by the heel of the Axis and now living in exile added their tributes to the countless greetings that poured into the White House. There, too, were gifts of all kinds, of great and little value.

Dinner at White House

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express in London said the President's birthday "concerns the whole of the free world and conquered millions." It declared: "Their fortune in President Roosevelt's sixty-first year and for many years to come will be molded by this man's character, the work he has done and the forces he sways."

Last night Mr. Roosevelt sat down with a group of close friends for an intimate dinner at the White House. Gathered around the birthday cake were members of the President's "cuff-link gang" and other friends such as the Prince and Princess of Norway, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., Robert Sherwood, playwright, and the executive secretariat.

The dinner turned into a lively party with stunts and jokes being directed at the President.

Here is the menu served at the dinner:

Clam Cocktails
Clear Soup
Marrow Balls
Celery Assorted Olives
Roast Turkey
Chestnut Dressing
Cranberry Jelly
Deerfoot Sausages
Peas Spanish Corn
Casserole of Sweets With Apple
Orange and Cress Salad
Cheese Crescents
Chocolate and Macaroon
Ice Cream
Birthday Cake
Coffee

Afterward the President broadcast a message to the various birthday parties.

It Was Mrs. F. D. Jr.'s Birthday, Too

Portland, Me., Jan. 30 (AP).—Lieut. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., phoned the White House from a Portland hotel tonight.

Sure, he wished his father a happy birthday, and also talked with his mother and his wife.

But when he talked with his wife, he wished her a happy birthday, too.

"Most people don't know that her birthday falls on the same day as my father's," grinned the handsome 6-foot naval officer, who has been on active service and away from his family for four months.

RINGSIDE TABLE—Five soldiers selected on the basis of general excellence from the Army's Headquarters Company meet their "blind dates" and find them easy on the eyes. The President's Birthday Ball Committee provided a ringside table at the Mayflower for the celebration

The Army produced some stars besides Lieut. Jimmy Stewart for the President's birthday celebration last night, and Washington produced some glamour girls to go with them.

Selected on the basis of general excellence from the ranks of the Army's crack Headquarters Company, stationed here, were five young men, and handsome. As "blind dates" for them, the Birthday Ball Committee provided five young women, and pretty.

And Andrew R. Kelley, the celebration's publicity chief, produced a ringside table at the Mayflower celebration, and photographers.

The young men, whose outfit is considered one of the Nation's elite, were Sergt. James S. Coleman and Privates John B. Roberts, Everett Eades, jr., Donald McDonald and Miles A. Copeland.

Sergt. Coleman, who is secretary of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade, had the honor of posing for a picture with Rosalind Russell. Private Copeland drew Pat O'Brien.

"Just my luck," complained Copeland. "All my life I've wanted to meet Rosalind Russell, and what do I get? Pat O'Brien!"

Seriously, though, he said, the party was a real success, and the others murmured "amen."

"My date," amended Copeland, nodding to Miss Honey, "compares most favorably to Miss Russell. . . . Yes, her name is significant."

Yank in Ulster Greets President by Air Wave; Foreign Rulers Pay Tribute on His Birthday

An American soldier serving with the A. E. F. in northern Ireland echoed the profound sentiment and heartfelt greetings of virtually the entire world to President Roosevelt upon his sixtieth birthday yesterday.

Master Sergt. James M. Todd, of Louisiana, broadcast the greetings of the A. E. F. by radio to the President from its base in Ireland.

Sergt. Todd said he was honored to join "our British friends" in greeting the President.

"I would like to say we have been made to feel we are most welcome here," he added. "We men of this force are strong in our determination to carry on the fight for the democracies.

"Naturally, at this time, being away from home—home is uppermost in our minds—and because of this it is with added deeper feeling that on behalf of the American forces on the British Isles we send our wishes for health, strength and our congratulations to our leader and President, Franklin Delano Roosevelt."

Messages Pour In

From every part of the globe countless messages of congratulation poured into the White House. They came from crowned heads and from persons of high and lesser rank.

From London, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the British Admiralty, sent a message, saying:

"Hundreds of thousands of people have reason to thank God for the day on which you were born.

In the "good neighbor" continent of South America, where all the governments have banded together to resist Axis aggression, there were scores of parties and fiestas in 16 countries.

Observances in foreign capitals included:

London—King George and Prime Minister Churchill sent greetings, as did Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. A Roosevelt birthday party drew representatives of 26 Allied nations who contributed $568 to the Warm Springs Foundation through an auction. Dr. Wellington Koo, Chungking's ambassador to Britain, eulogized the President.

Belfast—Premier J. M. Andrews of North Ireland expressed tribute of the people of Ulster to the President's "magnificent work in the cause of freedom."

Chungking—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek expressed confidence that the President's leadership would guide mankind "to the final overthrow of aggression and see the day of peace, tolerance and justice."

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies.—Walter A. Foote, United States consul general, broadcast a message as part of the island's celebration.

Red Paper Complimentary

Moscow—Izvestia, official organ of the U. S. S. R. supreme council devoted a special story to the President, described him as "the most outstanding political figure in modern America," and said he "owes his high prestige above all to the fact that he has been guided in his activities by the finest traditions of American democracy, by the traditions of Washington and Lincoln."

Buenos Aires.—Birthday balls in several cities of Argentina benefit the nation's charities.

La Paz, Bolivia.—Ball sponsored by Guillermo Guittierrez, newspaper publisher, who issued a special edition of La Razon.

Rio de Janeiro.—Mme. Darcy Vargas, wife of President Getulio Vargas, among prominent patronesses of a ball for the benefit of the Brazilian Red Cross.

Santiago, Chile.—The conservative newspaper El Diario Ilustrade said that as the years pass more South American countries recall the birthday of "the great President of the United States. Chile is rejoicing with satisfaction." Balls planned after impending congressional elections.

Medillo, Colombia—A benefit ball for the Red Cross was held at the Union Club, and another birthday celebration took place at Cali.

San Jose, Costa Rica—President Rafael A. Calderon Guardia praised the "distinguished service of President Roosevelt for humanity," the newspaper Diario de Costa Rica issued a special edition and the Governor of San Jose named a street "Avenida Roosevelt."

Havana, Cuba—Shares of proceeds at ball games and horse races turned over to Cuban hospitals and charities. Rotary clubs sponsored birthday balls in 39 cities.

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic—Several committees organized to stage birthday balls, newspapers issued special editions.

Quito, Ecuador—Birthday parties in honor of President Roosevelt held at Quito and Guayquil.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti—Gerard Lescot, son of the President of Haiti, organized committee sponsoring tonight's festival to benefit Warm Springs Foundation, press hails Roosevelt "champion of democracy."

Managua, Nicaragua—President Anastasio Somoza broadcast a "heartfelt message of salutation;" reception held for Allied and American diplomats at the presidential palace; dances and other festivals held throughout the country.

Montevideo, Uruguay—Celebrations in all principal cities.

Caracas, Venezuela — President Maximiliano Martinez cabled congratulations; newspapers published pictures and articles on Mr. Roosevelt's career.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras—President Tiburcio Carias prepared to present Mr. Roosevelt a cedar chest, filled with 200 cigars and a government scroll signed by governmental officials.

Panama—Balls, raffles and races benefit charities.

cinema and swelling their autograph books for an hour in the small ballroom, the stars made their way to the large one in a grand march led by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the dinner committee.

In his trail came Commissioner J. Russell Young, on whose arm hung the charming Rosalind Russell.

Under the great glass chandeliers and in a hall brilliantly bedecked with the flags of the United Nations, the civilian and military great gathered.

The list included the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Donald Nelson, war production chief, and Secretaries Jones and Wickard, of the President's Cabinet. Each received a standing ovation when introduced.

$10 a Plate Dinner

For the privilege of eating a fancy meal and staring at the movie stars as they ate the same meal, the 600 diners paid $10 each.

The movie stars were strung along a long, flower-strewn table facing the bunting-surrounded picture of the President. To their right and left over the doors to the hall blazoned huge signs, "Keep 'Em Flying."

Toward the end of the program, Meyer Davis and his orchestra suddenly struck up "Happy Birthday," and the crowd rose to sing it to the President. Some called him "Dear Mr. President" in the song, some "Dear President" and some "Dear Franklin."

They Laugh and Eat

Dorothy Lamour wore no sarong, but was glorified in a worthy evening creation and her uppish coiffure sprouted goldenrod.

Betty Grable, delightfully curvesome in cobweb lace over a flesh foundation, laughed more than she ate, for her dinner partner was Mickey Rooney, his hair slicked down this time.

Brenda Marshall's hair was spotted with wild red roses. She sat between two singers of widely varying repertoire—radio's Gene Autry on one hand and the fetching Dinah Shore, radio singer, on the other.

Jean Hersholt cocked his head to one side and looked raptly at the big picture of the President. Ensign Wayne Morris and Naval Lieutenants Robert Montgomery and Douglas Fairbanks sang lustily when the band played "Send Navy Down the Field."

And Also Sing

The Army, too, had uniformed representation in the actors' group—Lieut. Jimmy Stewart, who ate heartily, an old Army custom.

Most of the actors wore street suits, although Edward Arnold, Pat O'Brien, Gene Raymond and William Holden brought out their formal wear for the occasion.

Dinah Shore sang "Chattanooga Choo Choo" and Conrad Thiebault "With a Song in My Heart." Arnold, president of the Screen Actors Guild, said the actors were "proud and humble beyond description" to come to Washington for the celebration.

Appearances of the stars, who came in singles with escorts or in small groups, were spaced throughout the evening at these various places.

They appeared before thousands of birthday celebrators and from the enthusiasm shown every one of the thousands got his money's worth several times over.

Mickey Rooney just about brought down a house of 700 persons at the Shoreham. They jammed 50 deep around the bandstand while he gave a piano version of his one published song, "Have a Heart," and did "Blue Skies" on the drums. They yelled and screamed for more until he had to beg off so he could make his other appearances.

Eros Volusia, Brazilian actress-dancer, gave greetings in Portuguese. About the only English she can speak, she explained, is: "I can't spe-e-ek English."

Ruth Hussey greeted a special delegation from her home State of Rhode Island and Judy Canova told some hillbilly jokes at the Shoreham. Programs with autographs of the stars were auctioned off there, five of them bringing $133. One of the programs was bought by a Seattle man, John Gallagher, to give to a 7-year-old boy in his home town recently stricken with infantile paralysis.

At the Wardman Park party, filled to capacity like the others, Jackie Cooper did a "Honeysuckle Rose" turn on the drums after being introduced by Bonita Granville. Ermine-caped Carol Bruce sang "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You."

Cake Cutting Delayed

At the Mayflower Hotel, where more than 600 dined and danced, the lobby and front approaches were crowded with fans who waited hours to get a glimpse of the stars, only to be frustrated by the strategy used all evening of routing celebrities into the grand ballroom via alley tradesmen's entrances.

Some representatives of the ticketless few posted themselves at alley entrances and sneaked glimpses of the stars.

Another full house greeted the stars at the Hamilton Hotel. As it was at the other places, the stars came at intervals of every few minutes. John Payne at 9:30, Michele Morgan at 12:30, Patricia Morison and Lucy Monroe at 12:40 and so on. Here, too Mickey Rooney played the piano while the dancers crowded around.

The cake-cutting at Uline's Arena was delayed almost half an hour by Mrs. Roosevelt's tardy arrival. She explained, apologetically, that it all happened because one of her sons was on a radio program and she didn't want to miss it.

Police Hold Back Crowd

The crowd of more than 6500 jammed up against a wooden barricade erected 30 feet in front of the platform and policemen had to stand elbow to elbow clear across the floor to hold the crowd back.

Waiting for the ceremonies to begin at Uline's several of the stars passed the time by jitterbugging behind the screen. The "jivenist" couple was Bonita Granville and Jackie Cooper. More subdued pairs were Jimmy Stewart and Ava Gardner (Mrs. Mickey Rooney) and Pat O'Brien and Betty Grable.

Not a Star, She Stars

Joyce Romero, 16-year-old blind girl, of 119 Eleventh Street Northeast, sang at the Uline program and got as big a hand as some of the stars. She was accompanied by Mary Ann Mitchell, 16 years old, 612 Sligo Avenue, Silver Spring.

After the performance a couple of autographed programs were auctioned off to the crowd for $11 each.

During the evening Mrs. Roosevelt and the stars also made appearances at the Lincoln Colonnade, where a crowd of 500 attended.

Capitol, Earle and Howard Theaters had sellout midnight parties, and the stars made appearances at these, too.

Curfew for Government Girls Proposed for Efficiency's Sake

posed legislation revealed little enthusiasm.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, said "I think most Government employes have reached an age of discretion and know what they want to do."

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, objected to the Government trying to supervise the personal habits of any of its employes.

"If workers don't come to work on time, it's the duty of their supervisors to remedy the situation," he said. "Of course, one trouble may be that the supervisors are in the same shape."

A former school teacher of Huron, Ind., a town of 400, Representative Wilson is himself an early riser. Proposing a 10 p. m. curfew at the committee hearing, he later revised the time to 11 p. m. He admitted he wasn't sure how such a law could be enforced.

Before the committee he charged that he had been told of one Government office having 140 employes where the work could be done by six. One woman stenographer had to write a five-line letter for him three times because it was filled with mistakes in spelling and punctuation, he said.

"Maybe she was a little bit woozy from being up late the night before," he added.

Many Government employes are wasting time and money playing the horse races, Representative Manasco (Democrat), of Alabama, said. "They spend the morning bent over scratch sheets, and in the afternoon keep calling up to find out the results."

The criticism of executive branch efficiency came during a hearing on a measure sponsored by Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, the committee chairman, which would give the District area 50 million dollars in homes for Federal war workers and funds for expanded public utilities to service the new homes.

W. B. Stephens, coordinator and director of training for the Civil Service Commission, told the committee that 81,000 new Government workers have been employed here during the last 18 months.

A weekly influx of about 1000 is anticipated during the coming year, he said.

Discussing the inadequacy of the District to provide for the expanding Federal personnel, he said, "Not only a great many people needed here are refusing positions, but also many because they are not satisfactorily adjusted, turn around and go home almost as soon as they get here."

kind of government, there is no time for or interest in such things—no time for ideals; no time for decency; no interest in the weak and the afflicted to whom we in this country have dedicated this day.

The United Nations of the world continue, however, to put these things on a very different basis. We support our tasks of humanity in time of war, as in time of peace, through the same old system of telling the public of the great need, and asking for the voluntary help of men, women and children to fill it.

The fight against the disease of infantile paralysis has proven beyond doubt that the way democracy works—the voluntary way—is efficient and successful.

Today, as in these many years past, we continue this great crusade—made possible not by a few large gifts but by the dimes and the dollars of the people themselves.

This year there is only one difference proposed for the use of these gifts. The trustees of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis have told me that I can make the special announcement that the authorized county chapters throughout the union may use such portion of their share of this year's funds as is necessary to give special assistance to the children of any of our soldiers and sailors and marines who fall victim to infantile paralysis. That will be good news and a well-deserved boon to the fathers who are serving their flag on land and on sea in many parts of the world, and to the mothers who have been left at home to do their brave part—to carry on.

I am made additionally happy by the fact that in many of our sister republics of the Americas, parties and celebrations are being held today to provide needed help to the children in those lands.

For all these reasons I am very sure that this day has not been wasted—that it has been a useful day. For all that you have done, I am very grateful.

For we have all been helpful in lifting some of the clouds of unhappiness and anxiety which have settled down on many of our citizens. In that realization I am sure we shall have added strength to face the days of trial which lie ahead until peace with victory is assured.

The lives of all of us are now dedicated to working and fighting, and, if need be, dying for the cause of a better future—the future that belongs to our little children.

"BLEST BE THE TIE THAT BINDS"

- - - DR. JOHN FAWCETT - - -

Blest be the tie that binds
Our hearts in Christian love:
The fellowship of kindred minds
Is like to that above.

Dr. Fawcett, ministering in a small Yorkshire village for equally small stipend, had accepted the call of a prominent London church. But the tearful entreaties of his devoted parishioners prevailed upon him to remain. He could never sever the tie that bound them. Soon after, he wrote the beloved BLEST BE THE TIE THAT BINDS.

Dutch Toll of Jap Ships Put at 54

American Score For War to Date Is Put at 52

By the Associated Press

Batavia, N. E. I., Jan. 30.—The sturdy little Dutch navy and air force were reported authoritatively tonight to have sunk or damaged 54 Japanese ships in that many days. Netherlands troops still battled the invaders inside the charred Borneo oil city of Balik Papan on the debris-strewn Macassar Strait.

This impressive one-a-day Dutch toll included one Japanese battleship, 10 cruisers, seven destroyers, and 25 transports carrying thousands of troops and tons of supplies intended for a quick conquest of the Indies before Allied reinforcements arrive.

The figures given were exclusive of the costly casualties inflicted by American ships and bombers on the Japanese armada pushing southward toward Java.

[Washington Army and Navy communiques have listed 52 Japanese ships "definitely sunk" since the war began, including one battleship, four submarines, six destroyers, two cruisers, and 22 transports.]

Absence of new details of the Macassar battle which began a week ago indicated the Japanese may be hesitating, or at least stopping to reorganize their depleted ranks at Balik Papan, about halfway down the Borneo east coast.

But an official Dutch communique said the Japanese there were getting no rest. "Fighting continues not only near Balik Papan, but in the town itself," it said.

Bands of regulars and guerrillas also were reported in action on Minahassa Peninsula in northeastern Celebes, at Kendari in southeastern Celebes and in the Pontianak area of western Borneo, 525 miles above this Indies capital.

Informed sources said the Japanese—dependent on ships for their widely scattered drives in the south Pacific—could not endure such heavy losses indefinitely, but they believed a new Japanese push in Macassar Strait was imminent.

They assumed that the Japanese had to risk even greater losses in a supreme effort to knock out Java, seat of the United Nation's command, before the Allies can pour more men and equipment into the area.

The German radio announced with a fanfare of trumpets yesterday that German submarines have sunk 43 ships totaling 302,000 tons since the war with the United States began. This announcement, based on a special communique direct from Hitler's headquarters, added 13 ships totaling 74,000 tons to the previous score claimed by the Germans.

60-Hour Week?

Industrial production will play an important part in determining the final outcome of the war. At the present time, the work-week in Britain and Germany is 60 hours or more. How many hours do Americans in war industries work today? How many hours per week do they think they will have to work in order to win the war? See the Gallup Poll in tomorrow's Post for the answers to these important questions.

"Undoubtedly the 'jumping' of signal lights by street cars and buses is as great a traffic hazard as any other single element in our crowded traffic picture," the AAA said. "If police were instructed to crack down on motormen and bus drivers who insist on this practice of going through intersections after the light has changed, and on starting their vehicles up into crowded traffic lanes as soon as the amber light shows, the hazard would be reduced," it was said.

U. S. Airmen Attack Jap Base in Burma

By the Associated Press

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 30.—Burma's American air defenders shifted today to the attack, strafing a Japanese air base on the Moulmein fighting front in southern Burma while British and Burmese troops on the ground held fast to their positions.

The American volunteer group squadron lost one pilot. His fighter burst into flames while diving low at his target.

This is the second casualty in seven days, during which the former United States Army and Navy airmen have downed 30 Japanese planes. Their bag for the war is at least 111.

Both south and east of Moulmein the British said they had the situation well in hand.

Just where the eastern invading column had been engaged was not stated. The last previous reports had put the Japanese within 30 miles of Moulmein, which is across the Gulf of Martaban from Rangoon.

As to air operations, the regular day British communique reported only that one British plane had been lost in R. A. F. sorties over enemy territory.

[Tokyo claimed only that Japanese were advancing toward Moulmein in three columns; one west from Kawkareik, due east of the Gulf of Martaban port; another from Tavoy on the south and the third from a point between these two places.]

British Forces Are Withdrawn From Area Around Captured Bengasi

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Jan. 30.—The major part of the British forces covering Bengasi were reported tonight to have been withdrawn safely from the area of that Axis-occupied port after a fierce rear-guard action against Field Marshal Gen. Erwin Rommel's sustained and powerful counter-thrust along the road of his previous defeat.

The great majority of the supply dumps established by the British Eighth Army after the city was taken on Christmas eve were blown up and such harbor works as had been repaired were again destroyed.

The rear-guard action was left to the Seventh Infantry Brigade. In London it was reported all of these men had been saved before the Germans got astride the main coastal road north of Bengasi. It was suggested some men might have been removed by sea.]

Rommel's recapture of Bengasi, some 180 miles back from the farthest point of his initial retreat, was accomplished by two columns which struck in greatly superior force, the imperial British command announced in Cairo.

This was Rommel's maneuver:

One strong enemy force, supplied with tanks, attacked frontally and threw back an Indian brigade while a second and even stronger enemy by-passed Bengasi and cut in behind it astride the coastal road running to the north.

Thus caught in converging and overwhelming fire, a full Indian division covering the port was compelled to fall back to the northeast.

The British line at Msus, about 70 miles southeast of Bengasi, still appeared in control of the situation there, however, and in a brief skirmish threw back enemy detachments.

Parasites

President Roosevelt's suggestion that "parasites" should move out of Washington to make room for war workers comes on the heels of Housing Coordinator Palmer's intimation that private housing facilities may have to be seized. Both are doubtless trying to dramatize the gravity of Washington's predicament. The city is already swarming with people who have great difficulty in finding a place to sleep. With new Government employes coming in at the rate of 1000 a week, drastic measures will be inescapable.

Certainly wartime Washington is no place for persons who are merely seeking a good time. The President's request that social butterflies find a more placid atmosphere in which to flit until the war is over is no joke. At present he is merely appealing to the patriotism of Washington's nonworking population. But it is well to remember that the President has power to take over hotels, apartment houses, office buildings and even private homes for war purposes. And the Commissioners could use the powers granted in the so-called Blackout Act to expel people from the Capital in case of necessity.

The first relief measure, aside from the voluntary migration of nonworkers, should be speedy approval of Mr. Palmer's housing plan for the metropolitan area of Washington. Congress has been inexcusably slow in getting this work started in spite of the careful planning work that has been done. Every week of further delay will intensify the log jam that is already gravely interfering with the war effort here at its very center. Congress would be shortsighted, indeed, if it should risk a bogging down in the direction of the war program, for the sake of a few million dollars, while it is spending many billions for creation of the world's most powerful military machine.

Testimony before the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee suggests, moreover, that the war agencies themselves can greatly relieve the strain upon the Capital City. Certainly applicants for jobs ought not to be encouraged to come here on the mere chance of finding work for which they are qualified. Most of the necessary training programs could doubtless be carried on elsewhere. And it is undoubtedly true that many of the thousands of men and women put on the Government payroll in recent months are not being effectively used. Employes who run around in circles not knowing what they are supposed to do will contribute nothing to winning the war. The war agencies ought to be very sure that they are making effective use of their personnel before calling for large numbers of new recruits. When the President is asking "parasites" to leave, in other words, executives should take every precaution against putting other types of "parasites" on the Federal payroll.

Forget Pearl Harbor!

At any rate, we should try, as Quentin Reynolds recommends, to forget it, and should try to remember that we still have a war to fight and a war to win. The Roberts report has told us in as much detail as we could reasonably have expected what happened at Pearl Harbor and why it happened. It has placed the responsibility. With hard work and united resolve most of the losses suffered at Pearl Harbor can be retrieved. In the meantime, of course, we shall have lost precious time—and it is this loss of time rather than the actual damage to the ships which has made Pearl Harbor such a serious defeat. But this seems all the more reason why we should not waste more precious time arguing about points—except by way of absorbing the lessons—on which we simply do not possess the historical perspective to pass judgment. Besides, it is barely possible, you know, that the Pearl Harbor fiasco of December 7, 1941, is no more symptomatic of a degeneration of the national character, and no more preclusive of victory, than, say, General Hull's fiasco at Detroit in 1812 or General McDowell's fiasco at Bull Run in 1861.

Anglo-American Pool

One subject that President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill talked about all the time during their historic conversations in Washington was raw materials. That is the revelation of Lord Beaverbrook. Everything else, according to Britain's Minister of Supply, was spoken of "occasionally." Always our two war leaders returned to "that anxious subject," raw materials. Clearly the stress was put in the right place, namely, on fundamentals. There can be no airplanes without aluminum; no guns or ships without steel; no steel without a dozen or more alloys. And raw materials are an "anxious subject" because of the many and serious shortages from which both countries are suffering in making enough of the implements of war to crush the Axis.

It is of the highest importance, therefore, that the two countries have now got together formally to pool their raw material resources. But pooling is only a partial answer to this overshadowing problem. The two countries must now work together on an active program for the acquisition of those raw materials which lie outside the two groups of nations. And not only must they remedy their own grave deficiencies; they must see to it that these and other useful raw materials do not fall into the hands of the enemy. Nothing is said on these points in the brief announcement of the appointment of the Combined Raw Materials Board. Yet the success of our war effort—as the stress imparted to this "anxious subject" by President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill testifies—may depend upon the swiftness and energy with which this inter-allied board goes about its buying policy.

First guarantee of success is that the organization shall be adequate to the job. Mr. Batt, American member of the Raw Materials Board, is, of course, the deputy of Mr. Nelson, and Mr. Nelson seems to have the fullest supervision over procurement and production. Presently he may have an opposite number in Britain of equal authority. But as yet authority over procurement in Britain is scattered over the Admiralty, the Ministry of Supply, and the Ministry of Aircraft Production. Sir Clive Baillieu, British member of the Raw Materials Board, is thus not as fortunately situated as to decisions as is Mr. Batt. Yet in another and more vital aspect of organization the British are better equipped. Such buying agencies in Britain as the Ministry of Supply and the Ministry of Economic Warfare have their own funds with which to buy raw materials. In this country, however, the statutory authority and the pursestrings are still held by the Federal Loan Administrator, Jesse Jones.

It is impossible to determine at present whether Mr. Jesse Jones will be left with the task which has heretofore been his responsibility of buying materials abroad. Section 3 of the Executive order setting up the War Production Board implies that in this respect the Federal Loan Administrator shall "comply" with Chairman Nelson's orders. But Mr. Nelson's authority over Mr. Jones has not yet been put to the test. Yet, as we repeatedly said even before the proof came last December 7, neither Mr. Jones nor Mr. Jones' methods can be fitted into any war organization that is bent upon producing quick and effective results. He has always put business before defense by a tendency to drag out negotiations with sellers and delay contracts for raw materials. He has forgotten the admonition of the father of modern business, Adam Smith, that "defense comes before opulence." Now that events have put defense first, we can no longer follow businesslike tactics in our buying. In other words, we can no longer wait for sellers of our strategic and critical materials to come to our doorstep with their stocks, or haggle and procrastinate over terms and contracts. The price we have paid for that sort of policy has already been so tragically high that there must be an entirely different approach.

The two countries must be on the alert all over the world to buy, buy, buy. And their agents must have the money to buy with. Raw materials of many varieties we must have in order to keep our war industries working at full pitch. Even those we don't need should be bought in order to keep them from the enemy. It may be unbusinesslike to pay several times the market price against an enemy bidder, but, if that is the only way of getting the goods, that is what must be done. For either supply or preclusive buying constitutes just as effective warmaking as physical battling on land or sea. Indeed, it is even more important. Our soldiers and sailors cannot fight without weapons, and they are being sacrificed because the enemy has been able to amass more weapons than ourselves.

Maybe there is still a lingering fear that such boldness might find this country at the end of the war saddled with surplus material and equipment. That is the business approach to raw material buying. But that argument for conservative buying can easily be turned on its advocates. This war is costing no less than a billion dollars a week. It can be shortened only as we are successful both in munitioning our war industries and in diverting materials from the enemy. The extent to which the war can be shortened by this method must therefore be rated in terms of cash gain at a billion dollars a week. But the prime argument for a vigorous buying policy abroad is that American lives all over the world are dependent upon it. That is what puts the anxiety into the subject which engaged President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill all through their Washington conferences.

Langer Case

The majority report of the Senate Elections Committee which voted over a month ago to recommend the unseating of Senator Langer (Republican), of North Dakota, has just been released. The report recites in considerable detail the reasons for concluding that Mr. Langer is disqualified, and says that the charge of moral turpitude "has been proven beyond reasonable doubt." Senator Connally, one of the three members dissenting, maintains, on the contrary, that "every issue in the Langer case is disputed." He adds that the "weight of evidence is not sufficient to cause me to vote to unseat him." However, the combined weight of the numerous charges of wrongdoing summarized in the majority report constitutes a very impressive indictment of Mr. Langer. Moreover, the 13 to 3 vote which followed the taking of testimony shows that partisan politics played no part in the verdict, since all three minority votes were cast by Democrats. As The Post pointed out when the vote was first announced, the makeup of the Elections Committee as well as the submergence of politics lead one to believe that Mr. Langer has had a fair hearing.

To a certain extent the investigation was simplified because there was no question as to the legality of the election which brought Mr. Langer to the Senate. The point at issue was whether he was personally fit to serve as the elected representative of North Dakota. The constitutional right of the Senate to disbar members on personal grounds is unconditional. The Senate is the final judge of "the elections, qualifications and returns" of its members. The advantage of this sweeping grant of power to disbar or expel is that the Senate may remove unfit individuals whom it might not be possible to convict of wrongdoing in a court of law. Of course, such power should be exercised with great care, not only in justice to the individuals concerned, but also in order to preserve our representative system of government against attacks from within. In the present instance there is no reason to fear that the final vote will be influenced by ulterior motives. The unfavorable verdict rendered by the Elections Committee will undoubtedly weigh heavily against Mr. Langer.

Soft Spot

Compliments are due to Maj. Gen. Chu Shih-Ming, military attache of the Chinese Embassy. General Chu belongs to that very small and distinguished class of military prophets whose forecasts have been promptly verified by events. Some of our readers will recall Mr. Folliard's interview with General Chu, published in The Post, December 8. At the time the general complained that the same Americans who had so woefully underestimated the striking power of the Japanese air power had quickly fallen into the opposite error of exaggerating it. Actually, he said, the air force is the weak point in the Japanese armor. The reason lies in its qualitative inferiority to both the American fliers and the R. A. F., especially in the matter of fighter pilots. General Chu put it on psychological grounds: the patient, methodical, hard-working but slow-witted Japanese makes a fair-to-middling bomber pilot, but as a fighter pilot is incapable of thinking fast enough to take care of himself in a dog fight. The general predicted that this would become more and more evident as the fighting in the Pacific war progressed.

Well, General Chu knew what he was talking about. The Japanese fighter pilots have not only been unable to take care of themselves against British Hurricanes and the Curtiss P-40s used by the American volunteers in the Chinese air force; they have apparently been badly beaten in encounters with bomber pilots. This inadequacy of the Japanese fighter pilots against bombers was doubtless one big factor in the tremendous losses inflicted on the Macassar convoy. From Burma, Malaya and the Philippines comes much the same story. Of course, this great advantage of ours—which in our chagrin over Pearl Harbor we were so slow to recognize—will go for almost nothing, if the Japanese, through their still enormous quantitative superiority, are able to seize all bases from which our qualitative superior air forces can operate. But the record to date certainly strengthens General Chu's main point that if the Americans and British could only bring aerial strength to the job, the Japanese air power could be quickly and permanently destroyed.

Understanding U. S.

Mr. Lippmann in his column "The President and the People," made a remarkable pronouncement, to wit: "The American people are not children, and they will have to be treated as adults if they are to face the grim future as men and women." I reiterate, this is a remarkable pronouncement. How did he happen to come to such a conclusion? What were the mental processes behind this thought? Was it perhaps brought about by the many childish acts of our duly elected and appointed representatives or our childish approach to the tremendous forces of evil all about us?

Mr. Lippmann talks about Mr. Churchill being the only statesman in the world who believes the people can understand the war. This to me sounds like baby talk, especially when one realizes the number of columnists we have who clutter up the columns of our American newspapers with the final and complete solution to all of our problems both domestic and foreign. What chance would Mr. Churchill have in competition with this powerful brain trust.

Fortunately for us Mr. Roosevelt understands the United States. He knows that there is only one newspaper in the country that carries on without "funny pictures." Mr. Pegler said, not so long ago, that Mr. Roosevelt tricked us into re-electing him—like giving a child castor oil in orange juice—but now since it is done, we are glad he did it.

The American people are not children, says Mr. Lippmann, yet the Congress of the United States refused the other day to act on much needed defense housing legislation until certain men connected with housing were forced out of office. If you don't play like I want you to play I am going to pick up my marbles and go home. The American people are not children, yet for the past six months or more we have been trying to get a price control bill and are seemingly as far away now as we were in the beginning. Men and women are supposed to be able to control their emotions, to accept just criticism with complacency. Children's emotions are unrestrained.

Children cajole their elders into doing the things they want them to do and when they get old will condemn them for their leniency if they turn out bad. The wise parent is not cajoled and his children rise up to call him blessed.

Mr. Roosevelt understands the American mind better than any other living man and may God bless and keep him in health and strength until this hour of trial is past, and may he also be spared that his greater wisdom may assure the lasting peace for which a war-weary world so fervently hopes.

CHARLES H. FLAGG.

National Unity Week

I propose that we ask President Roosevelt to set aside the week starting February 8 or 15 to be known as "National Unity Week." The purpose of this week will be to help the 130 millions of our people to realize just how serious this war is and help show the Germans, the Japs, and the Italians that we mean to win this war.

During this week, all the people of our country should be asked to work harder and strive harder in every way, including the buying of defense stamps and bonds, to start our Nation and the United Nations on the road to victory. I believe that such a week would go a long way toward really uniting our people and would help make them understand fully the need for the sacrificing that they will be called on to make, as the war goes on.

Special Privileges

All men approve the democratic principle of "special privileges to none" but with the proviso that, of course, the special privileges which they have enjoyed and which have come to be considered vested rights must not be interfered with. The protected manufacturer must continue to have tariff protection, agriculture must continue to receive subsidies of billions from tax payers' money together with "parity" prices, while labor unions must not be deprived of such legislative favors as the Wagner Act and the National Labor Relations Act with continued immunity for racketeering. Then there is land monopoly which must not be interfered with, while the churches must continue to enjoy the special privilege of exemption from taxation. Of course, each special privilege is tolerant of every other special privilege. The result of this is an aggregation of special privileges which constitute an effectual barricade against fundamental economic reform.

Coastal Shipping

It looks as if some of our tanker captains are unconsciously playing into the hands of our enemy. What could please Germany more than to have our tankers deliberately go out onto the Atlantic seaboard where her U-boats can make easy targets of them! Have our oil shippers not heard over the radio, or seen the press reports, of nearly a dozen ships sent to the bottom along our Eastern coast recently—and most of them have been tankers? We are cautioned to conserve our gas and oil, but these tanker captains deliberately put their craft in the line of fire of submarines off our coasts, where they have lost thousands of tons of oil, and their ships along with it, with part of the crew! If our other war operations are as stupid as this, then we are in for a long war indeed!

Mr. Roosevelt suggested not long ago that our oil be shipped by rail. It would seem that ordinary common sense would suggest it, and that our tankers should be laid up, at least until the U-boat menace is cleared up. Some may say that our tankers are armed. What if they are; they are absolutely defenseless against U-boats at night. Who could find the periscope of a U-boat at night a mile or more at sea with waves at this time of year of 20 to 35 feet high?

This Lady Hawkins is another disaster, as just reported in this morning's Post—255 feared lost! Why do people, with their children, risk a dreadful death at sea at these times? What circumstance leads them to take such ghastly risks with their children? They do not appear to realize just what is going on in this world! This is the time for only soldiers and sailors to go down to the sea in ships, and with equipment for war and their own defense along with them. Of course, supply ships must go too, but the greatest efforts known to modern science must be used for their defense. Only wisdom and proficiency can shorten the war.

Transferable Bonds

We are daily urged to buy national defense bonds, but good citizens do not need to be urged to do their duty, they only ask to be given the opportunity. Right now there are millions of dollars that would pour into the national Treasury every day from one great group of citizens, the people of the "grass roots," if the Government would issue a bond in a form that would be acceptable to them. The acceptable bond would be in denominations of $25, $50 and $100. It would be a noninterest-bearing ten-year bond and above all it would need to be transferable. It is the nontransferable restriction of the present defense bonds that makes it almost impossible for the "grass roots" people to buy them.

Business corporations of all kinds must keep a reserve fund of ready cash to carry them through emergencies, and our private citizens must do the same. To them, the emergencies most feared are loss of jobs, sickness, accidents, etc., and when the emergencies happen, the citizen must rely on the little reserve cash to carry them through. They fear to use their funds to buy the present defense bond, but they would willingly give a part, or all if need be, of this little reserve fund to Uncle Sam in exchange for a transferable bond, for it could be used for every purpose for which a bank check is used, and one of Uncle Sam's bonds is as good as any bank check ever written. It would help business, for if a $25 bond passed through ten transactions each year or in its ten years of life, it would have created $250 of business and employment, and now of all times we must not put a bottleneck on either.

I am told by one Senator that this form of a bond would be like having your cake and eating it, and might be a cause of inflation. Inflation is a bogeyman, spook or hobgoblin that is held up to scare people, and it seems to have put a scare into a lot of them. Horse feathers and baloney. If Uncle Sam wants these millions for national defense, the sooner he issues a noninterest-bearing, transferable ten-year bond, the sooner he will get them. And that much sooner will he be able to stop the mongrel Japs from shooting back at us the broken-down Fords, the old mowing machines, the useless machinery and all other scrap iron of all kinds that was sold to them during the past years till the protests of our people who could look ahead got so strong that the Government put a stop to it. Remember Pearl Harbor, and the end is not yet. Pearl Harbor was only the beginning.

Wearing People Out

Now that Government workers are putting in longer hours, a lot of them would appreciate a little streamlining of transfer points between buses and carlines. For what purpose are they made to walk from one to two extra blocks at such places and dodge traffic across one or two extra throughfares? Examples of such transfers are at Fourteenth and Harvard north, and Sixteenth and Connecticut Avenue carline south. Safety and time-saving might be better served.

In line with the above—here is a prediction that some day the Government may find it expedient to devise and install some kind of "horizontal escalator system" in "Brother Hoover's" two and three-block-long buildings, such as the Interior and the Department of Commerce Buildings. Doctors say some of these buildings are wearing a lot of people out.

And, for the duration, why not turn portions of certain parks into Government-run parking lots? It would be easier to re-seed them than for people to run their legs into stumps in these times.

The Post Impressionist

Mile Of Dimes

"Who was the originator of the Mile O' Dimes?"

This question has been asked hundreds of times during the past few years and any number of persons have been credited with being the father of the thought.

However, it is our belief that it was born in the heart of a little miss of 11 years of age, just 34 years ago; who first used this method to raise funds to fight the white plague of tuberculosis in the State of New York.

It was on Palm Sunday, April 12, 1908, that an unannounced visitor walked into the office of the Sunday editor of the old New York World and shyly said "Mr. Editorman, I'm Loretta Stoddard from Second Street and my friend Myrtle Davis lives on Staten Island and my other friend, Nellie Kearney, lives in Brooklyn and the three of us are trying to get a mile of pennies and when we get the mile we're going to send it to Stony Wold, 'cause we're cured now and if they don't get the pennies they'll have to close the big dormitory and they'll have to send the boys and girls back to the city and they won't get cured. We saved up all of our pennies that were given for us for bunny rabbits and Easter eggs and here they are."

She then produced a narrow strip of linen 1 yard in length, carefully sewn in such a way that a penny could be inserted in each opening. The strip held fifty pennies.

"It will take 1760 yards of pennies to make a mile, but when the mile is filled it will make $880 and that will bring an awful lot of happiness to the little children at Stony Wold and maybe they will not have to close up one of the dormitories," continued Loretta in one breath.

"From the time I can remember," she said, "until I went to Stony Wold three years ago I never could play or have a good time like the other little girls I knew and now I am having just heaps of fun. Mamma and papa did everything they could for me and lots of doctors tried to make me well, but all of them said it was no use to give me medicine. And then one day a real nice lady heard about me and told my mamma about Stony Wold. I was always taking medicine but after I went to Stony Wold I never took a bit of medicine but spent all my time out in the open air . . . It is a year now since the doctor said I was all well and I came home, but I never forget Stony Wold.

"When I came home the doctor told me I would keep well if I would stay out in the open air a lot and always have my window open when I sleep. When I was a little girl I always wanted to be able to go out and play with other little girls, but I was never well enough to. Now I can jump rope and skate all day and play all kinds of games without ever getting tired."

Stony Wold, a beautiful sanatorium for tubercular children, located on Lake Kushaqua, up in the bracing woods of the Adirondacks, was at that time having a difficult time making ends meet, as it was entirely dependent upon voluntary subscriptions from the general public.

The board of directors had said it would be necessary to close one of the dormitories, which accommodated 46 patients, unless a considerable sum of money was obtained for its maintenance by the following June. Failure to receive the desired amount would mean that these little patients must be returned to their homes and again be subjected to the ravages of the grim white plague which, in those days, took a toll of 10,000 souls in New York each year.

This, then, was why our little heroine and her two friends started their "mile o' pennies."

Through the kindness of her new found friend, "Mr. Editorman," her idea spread like wildfire and in the course of a few weeks a "mile o' pennies was being sought in every section of New York State for the benefit of the Stony Wold Sanatorium.

Needless to say, many times the necessary sum was raised, and the institution still carries on its crusade against the dread disease.

Little did Miss Stoddard realize that her unique idea would sweep the Nation, a quarter of a century later, in behalf of a similar work of mercy. THOMAS J. CULHANE.

Multiple Use Of Shelters

I propose that we dig underground and build shelters and garages for use as follows:

1. To appease our complacent OCD.
2. To relieve police by housing autos and to accelerate circulation.
3. To provide for the homeless on relief, at least at night.
4. To relieve traffic conditions.
5. To give a slight chance to defense workers to get anywhere to do anything.
6. To give all visiting pacifists a shelter in which to address fellow travelers of the pacifist variety protected from bombs.
7. To provide a forum for the anti-Saloon League, etc.
8. To provide a bombproof shelter in which Congressmen and Senators unable otherwise can secure an audience of more than 17 to hear their inanities.
9. To help brother Nelson we suggest that he take immediate steps to take over the Congressional Garage as a bombproof shelter to be used to house all hopefuls who have come to Washington with the expectation of securing a lucrative job, rent $85, pay $135 etc., and no sugar.

I also suggest Congressmen be allowed no tires but an allowance of 2 taxi fares per diem in the hopes they will stay on the job and do some useful labor.

I sorrowfully address The Washington Post with, however, no illusions knowing full well that we live in a world not yet startled into the dynamic from a static state, or in other words, we change not, in a changing world. We are a perfect example of the French proverb, "plus ca change plus c'est la meme chose." FATTI MASCHI, ESQ.

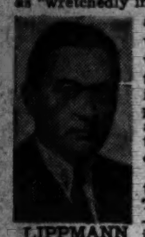
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Prices-As-Usual?

THE PRICE control bill, which Congress has finally passed, is denounced by the New York Times as "wretchedly inadequate." These are strong words which, if true, would mean that the Government is powerless to protect the people against an inflationary rise in the cost of living.



LIPPMANN

I venture to think that the Times is mistaken—first in supposing that the bill it wanted would have been adequate, second in supposing that the Government does not now have the power (provided the power is efficiently administered of course) to protect the consumer.

WHAT THE TIMES wanted was a bill which placed a ceiling over the prices of all goods and services as of some particular date. For many months, ever since Mr. Baruch launched this proposal, we have had an acrimonious debate over "price ceilings"—where they should be set and over what goods and services. In this debate the followers of Mr. Baruch have been taking the position that the criterion of a good and adequate price control bill was whether the ceiling was wide enough and low enough.

This preoccupation with price ceilings precipitated a long and rather bitter wrangle in which the real problem was almost never considered. For, as Mr. Nelson and Mr. Henderson are already beginning to demonstrate to us, the regulation of consumer prices in a war economy is fundamentally a matter of managing the supply of goods. Price ceilings no matter whether they are universal or selective, cannot be maintained by fiat or by civil and criminal prosecutions. They can be maintained only by managing the supply of goods in relation to the demand, and all this emphasis on ceilings is a case of trying to control the temperature by means of the thermometer, of dealing with the effect rather than with the cause. That is why no bill, however wide and however low the ceiling, would have been adequate.

THE BILL which Congress has passed is also preoccupied with ceilings and for that reason it is, taken all by itself, inadequate. But that does not mean that the powers of the Government are inadequate. It is clear that the powers of the Government are in fact very large, and if not adequate then very nearly adequate.

These powers are in the hands of Mr. Nelson, and we have only to read his directive of January 24 to Mr. Henderson, authorizing him to ration goods at retail, to see that the essential power over prices—the power to manage the supply—already existed before the so-called price control bill worked its weary way through Congress. For the power to ration—to allocate, to requisition, to fix priorities—is the substance of price control. The authority to fix the price of the goods which have been rationed is of course necessary. But if the goods have not first been rationed by taking control of the supply, fixing prices will do no good, and almost certainly a lot of harm.

FOR THE real problem is not "price control" but "supply control," and the preoccupation with ceilings obscures and confuses the work which has to be done.

We are having a demonstration of this in Washington. We have had here for a very long time a low ceiling on taxicab fares. Until the war boom struck Washington, the city was a paradise for the taxicab rider—there were plenty of cabs everywhere and the fare was low. Now there are not nearly enough cabs, and therefore, while they are still inexpensive, they are very hard to get, especially when they are most needed—during a snowstorm, for example, or at points remote from the center of the city.

The price remains low but the service has deteriorated. The ceiling, now that the demand has become greater than the supply, does nothing to solve the real problem—which is how to move about Washington. It is no consolation to stand on a wet and windy corner waiting for a cheap taxi that never comes.

TRANSLATE the illustration into the vital necessities of life—food, clothing, shelter, heat—and it is evident at once how little value there is in price ceilings unless there is under the ceilings the power to ration through control of the supply. What would happen with rubber tires or with sugar if Mr. Henderson merely put on a ceiling and did not ration them? There would be an official price at which it was difficult or impossible to buy tires or sugar, and an unofficial price—a bootleg price on the black market—at which the unscrupulous would get the better of those who were poor or scrupulous. There would be corruption and injustice, scandal and discontent.

Thus we may congratulate the Administration—in the person of Messrs. Nelson and Henderson—on having escaped the illusion that price ceilings as such are the answer to the problem. They are preparing to do what every wartime government has to do—to control the supplies, to ration them, and then and thereby to regulate the prices. But if half the energy that has gone into wrangling over ceilings had gone into planning and setting up the system of allocations, priorities, and rationing—to be applied wherever the supply is short and the demand is urgent—we should be further along. We should also have avoided the dismal and futile recrimination about the farm bloc, the labor bloc, and big business which have decorated this misguided debate.

WE MUST disabuse ourselves of the idea, I believe, that our supreme objective is to freeze prices. Our objective should be to see to it that the necessities of life are fairly rationed, so that the sacrifices which must be made are spread equally.

The idea of frozen prices is a mirage. It is another variant of our old bogey, the delusion of business-as-usual. It holds out a hope which can never be fulfilled in wartime, namely that we can continue to buy what we have always bought at the prices we have always paid. We must replace it by the idea that we cannot buy all the things we have always bought, and that, therefore, the great object of public policy is to restrict all of us equally and to ration all of us fairly.

Wickard, Middleman

Asked to Explain

CAUGHT between a crossfire of Administration and farm bloc demands, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard yesterday was asked to explain today before a meeting of the Senate Agriculture Committee his stand on farm prices.

His summons followed a special meeting of the committee held yesterday to discuss Wickard's reputed declaration in Atlanta, Ga., Wednesday for a price control policy that holds farm prices at parity. The price control law fixed 110 per cent of parity and three other levels to which prices could rise before imposition of controls.

Senate committeemen, including leading sponsors of the Bankhead amendment to the price control act, denied there would be "antagonistic" questioning. They said they intended to find out what the policy would be under the four farm-price levels laid down in the bill.

But renewal of the farm controversy, which gave the much amended price bill its closest call, appeared imminent. One Senator suggested that a rider may be attempted on an early bill to force the Commodity Credit Corporation to sell its stocks of stored wheat, corn and cotton only at levels prescribed in the bill.

WICKARD, formerly under Administration fire because he supported the Bankhead amendment and prices designed to increase farm production, warned in his Atlanta speech that advance of farm prices much beyond parity was a "danger signal." He said that "farm prices that are too high now will mean farm prices that are too low later on. If we take advantage of the situation to profiteer, an angry public will rebel."

The Bankhead amendment, giving Wickard dual control with Leon Henderson over farm prices, was adopted along with special farm price levers over Administration objections.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, produced a clipping of Wickard's Atlanta speech at yesterday's committee meeting and the eight Senators present voted to invite the Secretary of Agriculture to "explain it" at today's executive meeting.

"INASMUCH as the price control bill fixed certain limits below which no Government agency could interfere, we felt the farmer has a right to know what he can expect," said Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who attended the meeting.

Thomas said that cotton prices, which had risen above 110 per cent of parity to 20.11 cents a pound on Tuesday, dropped below 19.61 on Wednesday, and other farm prices "broke" after Wickard's statement.

firm again and our armies will storm ahead again."

Referring to the halt of the Nazi offensive and his assumption of supreme command of German arms, the Fuehrer said "in the moment of these difficulties I thought it my duty to shoulder the responsibilities myself."

"But our greatest difficulties are behind us," he said. "Our soldiers know they hold superiority over the Russians."

For an hour and 53 minutes Hitler spoke to the German nation observing the ninth anniversary of his elevation as Reichschancellor. His immediate audience was made up of party members, soldiers and representatives of other Axis powers. His speech was broadcast throughout Germany to occupied countries, Italy, Finland, Rumania, Croatia and Manchukuo.

Looks Fresh, Healthy

He was introduced by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, who praised him for "looking so fresh and healthy."

Hitler began his speech in the familiar pattern with attacks on Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt, and a review of what he described as Germany's peaceful intentions following the World War.

Nazi Military Power

By Otto Strasser

New Campaign Is Imminent

THERE IS a growing danger in the popular tendency to believe that because of the German defeat in Libya and retreat in Russia, the military power of Hitler is already broken. It is necessary that these events be placed in their correct perspective by taking into full account the strength of Hitler's military machine, so that we shall not be unduly surprised by future developments.

Churchill's speeches, as well as British reports from Libya, make it clear that there are not more than three German divisions (one and one-half, at the most, being mechanized), besides six to eight Italian divisions, in North Africa.

As for the Russian situation, we must bear in mind that Soviet propaganda overestimates the turn of the tide, partly because it is an exhilarating event to be on the offensive after a long grinding retreat—and any country would overestimate such a change; and partly to counteract the cry for Russian participation in the Far East by centering world attention on their action in Europe.

AN ACCURATE APPRAISAL of developments in Russia, to my mind, has been that of Gen. H. S. Sewell, writing in "Bulletins from Britain." "The Russians held the Nazis at a critical time," he states, "but it was no convincing victory in the field which turned the tide. The supply line from Germany was strained beyond its power to function efficiently. Nazi soldiers were at almost the limit of their powers of endurance and without hope of quick mechanized support. That is what halted the attack, and for the Germans to have waited in the open and the bitter cold to organize for a knock-out blow against the Moscow defenders would have been to court disaster.

"The turn of events," Gen. Sewell contends, "cannot be described as the result of any crushing blow by Russia. A victory, yes, and one which may yet be compared to that won by the R. A. F. over the Nazi Luftwaffe in 1940, but it is not such a victory as can be expected to be a prelude to Germany's collapse."

With this orientation in mind it need also be remembered that of Hitler's original army of 300 divisions, he has at least 100 divisions free for a new campaign. (By way of comparison, it is said that British and Imperial troops in Britain now total 75 to 80 divisions). Accepting the recent figures from London that 12 of the 23 Nazi mechanized divisions have been knocked out, at least temporarily, in the Russian campaign, there still remain 11 ready for action, a number of which would be available for a new drive.

There is no doubt that Hitler will be forced to use this power in a new offensive somewhere. Such would be true at any time, for the Nazi regime can exist only with a succession of victories; but it is especially true at the moment, because Hitler is now his own commander and will have to produce successes to recoup his own prestige and to show what can be done under his leadership by contrast to that of the Prussian generals.

HITLER IS, therefore, not only able, but determined and compelled to go into action, compelled also for reasons apart from the European situation, namely, the fulfillment of Axis obligations to Japan by keeping potential Allied reinforcements away from the Far East. Nazi preoccupation with Russia is of very secondary consideration to the Japanese; they are not fighting Russia. In fact, they are at the moment continuing negotiations with Russia for extension of fishing rights in Siberian coastal waters where Japanese fishermen will be protected from British and American molestation. When the Japs refer to "our common enemy," they mean "our common enemy," and that spells Britain and the United States.

The only open question is: Where will Hitler strike?

Geography combines with Axis obligations to make it clear that the blow will fall against the British. There are some who believe that he is contemplating an invasion of Britain; I cannot deny that possibility, but from my knowledge of Hitler's mind, I doubt that he will attempt an invasion now, because he knows that it is his last card. If he did not triumph with it, it would all be over. I am convinced that he will try an invasion some day, but it will be in the eleventh hour of his career. Today he has still another card to play—or even two associated ones; an attack on the British in the Mediterranean and another intensification of the battle of the Atlantic.

I believe that Hitler will strike in the Mediterranean area within a month and that he will do so with a giant pincer movement, aiming at (1) Gibraltar, and possibly Malta at the same time; and (2) through Turkey to the Mosul oil fields and Suez.

THE ATTACK on Gibraltar will be, in good part, a political stroke; at least, it will not be a major military campaign. The Nazis need only the permission of Spain to go through. They cannot hope for active Spanish collaboration because, as an Atlantic nation, Spain is too familiar with the potential of American power to link her fate positively with that of Hitler. On the other hand, Spain cannot and will not oppose Hitler, so that with ten divisions, control of the whole Iberian Peninsula could be obtained. Although it is unlikely that the Nazis would be able to reduce Gibraltar, it would be of no further use as a base and the western entrance to the Mediterranean would be closed through command of the narrow channel with guns, long ready on the Spanish side, at Algeciras, and on the African side, at Ceuta.

By contrast with the fairly limited campaign, the drive in the Near East would be a full scale venture, with one million men and supporting mechanized divisions. In the Mosul oil fields, Hitler hopes to get the oil he missed in the Caucasus. Meanwhile, having jailed or conquered Turkey, the Nazi position in the Black Sea would be immeasurably strengthened, and the threat to the Caucasus renewed, so as to compel the Russians to swing much of their army southward and relieve the pressure on the central sector.

FURTHER, with Turkey and the Mosul oil fields, Hitler would be in a position to continue against Suez, relieving British pressure in Libya, or to drive eastward against India if Japan is ready a few months hence to attack from Burma—meanwhile cutting the Allied supply line to Russia through Iran.

Thus it is seen that Hitler is not only forced to undertake a large-scale offensive, but is able and determined to do so. Although it will bring him no closer to a decisive victory in the war, it would be wrong to underestimate his possible attainments at either end of the Mediterranean. For with the western end closed, and the western ports of Spain and Portugal available for submarine bases, the Battle of the Atlantic will be extended far southward from the northern waters where it has been concentrated to date, threatening the Allied shipping routes around the Cape to the Middle and Near East.

At the eastern end of the Mediterranean, control of Turkey, Syria and the Mosul oil fields will bring Hitler within striking distance not only of closing the Suez, or combining with the Japanese in a double thrust against India, but of attacking from the south when the spring offensive is resumed on the eastern front.

Admittedly, there are many glaring weaknesses in the Axis position, upon which I have not dwelt. But to be able to capitalize on them fully, there is need for an all-out effort of Allied production and fighting forces, combined with the revolutionary propaganda directed at the German home front, thus increasing Hitler's difficulties in both the civilian and military sphere.

The Once Over

Dearest Dolores: This is a short letter on account of because I am right in the middle of things. I think I am in Ireland but I ain't two sure. All I know is that when I started singing Kathleen Mavourneen I got almost as much ice as when a buddy called for three years for Dublin.

Sergt. Mooney says there is two parts of Ireland the north part and the south part and that whichever part we are in it ain't the St. Patrick's Day parade part, so the best thing is to lay off all stuff about the Blarney Stone and the Lakes of Killarney until we know more about the situation.

Like I said before I ain't even positive this is Ireland. All I no is that I have been switched around so fast lately I am dizzier than ever before except the first time I saw you. I think I been on a ship but it may have been I have just been in a army tank. The only difference between a ship and a tank is that a tank can make you sea-sick on dry land.

Eddie Steukel who is in my company says he don't think we are in Ireland at all on account of because the fog aint thick enough and it is two quiet also he has seen no colleens like in those George Cohan shows all blackhaired and beautiful. He says you can tell 'em because they always have their hands on their hips and are dancing jigs.

Anyhow, my darling, I am in good health and think of you all the time. I will write more as soon as I get a chance.

All my love,
OSCAR.

Dear Oscar: You will never know how pleased I was to get your letter saying you had arrived safe somewhere even if you don't know for sure just where. Your letter has been censored so often even the stamp was off so I couldn't tell where you are either. If you are out of the country I would rather have you in Ireland than lots of other places and no matter where you are I am glad that you have seen no colleens around so far.

It says in the papers here that De Valera has filed a protest against your landing in any part of Ireland north or south. This worries me. I asked some friends who know Ireland about this and they said DeValera is head man in the south part where nobody dares to land without an invitation. But I guess you had an invitation to land in whatever part you are in or Roosevelt wouldn't let you try it.

I wish you were someplace where it would not cost more than ten cents to phone you. As soon as you find out for certain where you are let me know. Wally Decker, who lives next door (he is an ensign in the navy) says he does not think you are in Ireland and that the government's just saying so as a blind.

I will write you a long letter tonight. This will have to do for now. I am just sending this care of the U. S. Army with your division number.

All my love,
DOLORES.

Dear Dolores: Just a couple of lines to let you know I have found out I am not in Ireland after all. But never mind about what that ensign next door says about me. How many times I got to ask you please ignore all sailors? If you loved me you would no better then to ask a sailor where he thinks I am. Will write a good long letter soon. I miss you orful.

Dublin Claims U. S. Violated Eire Neutrality

By the United Press

Dublin, Jan. 30.—The government charged today that the landing of American troops in North Ireland violated Eire's neutrality and said it was determined to resist invasion from any direction.

(At Belfast, R. A. F. headquarters announced there was "some slight enemy activity" over North Ireland today, and that air defense went into action.)

An official statement said Premier Eamon de Valera and the government regard presence of United States troops in northern Ireland as tacitly supporting Britain's desire to keep the northern counties divided from the south, and said their arrival was a new attempt of Britain to force Eire into war on the side of the Allies.

The United States has recognized a "Quisling government" in North Ireland by sending troops there, and the landing forces have taken a "lease" on Irish soil which seriously threatens the neutrality of Eire, the statement said.

Eire would prefer British troops to American in northern Ireland. It is understood, because the presence of Americans places Eire in a state of tension and might give the Axis powers an excuse for invasion to "protect her" from the Americans.

With the A. E. F. in Northern Ireland, Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Uncle Sam's doughboys took their first march in force today and were greeted by smiling Irish eyes all over the Ulster countryside.

They slogged along in battle equipment to toughen them up for sterner days to come. And as they marched, they sang songs strange to this land of brogues and banshees.

"They are nice chaps after all," said an elderly farmer.

"We were a bit frightened by fears of an invasion of smart guys but they are just modest fellows who seem earnest about their jobs. There is a seriousness about their ways which we never expected."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Past Expressions Of Patriots

COMMUNISTS? No, they're not Communists. They are—

Well, take, for example, an economic genius named Harold Loeb, who is identified by the Dies Committee as a "senior business specialist" on the staff of Leon Henderson, the price administrator, who has just been authorized to ration all goods sold at retail.

PEGLER

Mr. Loeb and Mr. Henderson were interested in technocracy some years ago and Mr. Loeb wrote a book about technocracy in which he said, "Our case would be hopeless if the profit system could be made to work."

Henderson was a member of the technocracy committee, one of whose early statements said that if technocracy were adopted "all social, political and economic theories of the present must be thrown away," but a little over a year later he resigned from the committee, rejecting technocracy. Mr. Loeb's book, however, was published two years after that, in 1935, and, in 1936, he wrote another called "Production For Use." He is not a businessman, by trade, of course. He does it by ear.

Mr. Loeb is quite an author. His other works include one called "Doodab," dedicated "To Kitty," published in 1925; "Tumbling Mustard," dedicated "To Poke," published in 1929, and "Professors Like Vodka," one of those roguish Parisian things, which came out in 1927 and was dedicated to—you'd never guess.

This tasty little tale, so revealing of the man who is now, above all available American believers in the American system, selected as a "senior business specialist" for price administration in a Nation at war, was dedicated to "My Friend Malcolm Cowley" who is—

A poet, deemed to be, among all Americans, the best man available for an $8000 job in the Office of Facts and Figures, and an old political comrade of William Z. Foster and James W. Ford, who were, respectively, the presidential and vice presidential candidates of the Communist Party. Comrade Ford, being a Negro, was selected as an incitation to civil commotion among the colored population, North and South, and Mr. Cowley, who, of course, is not and never was a Communist, himself, indorsed this ticket.

He also was a member of the national executive committee of the American League Against War and Fascism, whose directorate included Earl Browder, late chief of the Communist Party and now a prisoner in Atlanta, and Clarence Hathaway, late editor of the Communists' official organ in New York. Mr. Loeb's friend, Malcolm Cowley, poet and expert compiler of facts and figures at $8000 a year, to be paid, in part, out of the income taxes of the seven million new eligibles in income brackets as low as $14.50 a week, later went along with the league against war and fascism, when, because of the excessive heat generated by the popular anti-communist sentiment of the country, it changed its name to the American League for Peace and Democracy.

Even then, of course, Mr. Cowley was not a Communist, although there were Communists all about him and with him; nor had he succumbed, when, in 1936, his name appeared on the list of sponsors of a banquet to Mother Ella Reeve Bloor, a well-known Communist relic, who, incidentally, has a son in the present Government service, who, of course, is not a Communist himself.

Nor could you have called Mr. Cowley a Communist even when, in 1935, the Sunday Worker, the official organ in New York, advertised him as a contributing member of the staff, although you might have been tempted to this rash judgment had you known that the Worker commonly excludes nonmembers from its employ and asserts the right to censor all copy in the interest of the party.

Loose and idle talk about Communists, Communists, Communists is going to do no good whatever, except for Japan and Germany by causing disunity on the home front where the noted author, Mr. Loeb, has revealed his great but unsuspected capacity for Government powers over American business and Mr. Cowley, a poet by trade, surprises everyone by his indispensability as a fact-and-figure man at $8000 a year.

But if you want to be a dirty Quisling and a disrupter, go ahead and read false meanings into past expressions of such patriotic men, so devoted to the capitalistic system, under which, alone, in all the world, exist those freedoms for which this Nation fights, impugn their old motives and their present matchless talents for Government, and thereby help the enemy win the war.

Do you think Mr. Henderson would have a Communist around or Mr. Cowley's boss, Mr. MacLeish? If you do you are a dirty Quisling.

Nazi Ship Yields Rubber to U.S.

Rich booty, in the form of tons of metals, rubber and other critical materials, has been seized by the War Production Board from a German ship and from warehouses and terminals where the frozen supplies were being held against orders placed by European countries.

The board announced yesterday that its inventory and requisitioning section had authorized the seizure of the cargo of the German motorship Willmoto, interned at San Juan, Porto Rico, before the United States entered the war. The Axis vessel yielded 4000 tons of crude rubber, 100 tons of truck tires, 360 tons of brass, 50 tons of copper and "sizable quantities" of raw wool, hides, grains and peanuts.

Among other seizures recently authorized, the board said, was that of the machinery, equipment and supplies of a TNT plant, which had been shut down as a result of financial difficulties. The plant was restored to operation and is now turning out high explosives for the Army and Navy, it was stated.

In a similar operation, 50 miles of railroad track, totaling 3600 tons of metal, were taken over from a railroad company unable to use the material.

Seizures in recent weeks from warehouses holding supplies ordered by European firms yielded 1600 tons of copper, 80 tons of steel, 10 tons of tin, 10,000 cases of tin plate, and 200 bales of Manila hemp. In addition, a $35,000 piece of machinery, destined for a Canadian bridge-building firm, was requisitioned and will be used in the manufacture of naval equipment, the board said.

WPA Employment Declines

President Roosevelt reported yesterday that although WPA employment as a whole was declining steadily, an increasing percentage of relief workers were doing defense jobs.

In his annual message to Congress on emergency expenditures the President said, "The percentage of the total (WPA) workers employed on defense projects continued to increase (from the beginning of the defense program) and by June, 1941, defense work represented 30 per cent of the total WPA employment. During the first four months of the fiscal year 1942, the proportion on defense projects exceeded 30 per cent in each month. An average of 324,000 workers were employed on WPA defense work during November, 1941."

The President said that in that month WPA employment on all kinds of projects totaled 1,056,328, one of the lowest figures in the relief agency's history. He noted that during the fiscal year 1941, WPA employment averaged 1,700,000, which was about half the maximum average of the fiscal year 1939.

The Chief Executive explained that most of the defense work of WPA was for the War and Navy Departments, and usually consisted of such work as constructing buildings on military or naval reservations, building roads to such places, and especially preparing airports.

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt urged continuation of American assistance for relief agencies sending supplies abroad to people of some of the United Nations through approved organizations.

Many nations on our side need things for civilians, such as warm clothing, the Chief Executive said. The question of providing it merges, he asserted, with that of providing luxuries for American troops, such as heavy sweaters not supplied by the Government.

While everyone must give, domestic charities should not be permitted to suffer, the President said, and assistance must continue for such drives as those for hospitals and for combating infantile paralysis.

The Gallup Poll

Government Lotteries to Help Pay War Cost Are Favored by Majority in Nation-wide Poll

By Dr. George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 30.—With Washington casting about for new sources of revenue for war, the idea of Government lotteries as proposed in a bill introduced in Congress has substantial popular support. A Nation-wide poll by the American Institute of Public Opinion shows that a majority of Americans with opinions on the subject would approve such lotteries at this time.

The popularity of the idea is undoubtedly explained by the fact that, according to a recent Institute survey, 54 per cent of adults bet money on various games of chance during the past year. This means that more than 43 million people had participated in a gambling game at least once in a year's time.

The proposal for Government-operated lotteries was put to voters in the following form:

"Would you favor lotteries run by the Federal Government to help pay part of the cost of carrying on the war?"

Results were:

Yes	54%
No	37
Undecided	9

Confining the vote to those who expressed an opinion, the results would be: Yes, 60 per cent; no, 40 per cent, or a substantial majority in favor.

In a similar poll a year ago, the Institute found that 51 per cent were in favor of Government lotteries, while 38 per cent were opposed and 11 per cent expressed no opinion.

The most famous use of gambling for public or charitable purposes was the Irish Sweepstakes which, although not sponsored by the Government, earned more than half a million dollars annually for the hospitals of Dublin.

In Australia, lotteries are run by the governments of three of the six states. The proceeds go to hospitals and charities, and the government lottery idea is popular throughout Australia. A recent survey there by the Australian Public Opinion Polls, affiliate of the American Institute, found 77 per cent of Australian voters approving such lotteries.

In the United States those voters who favor the Government lottery idea argue, chiefly, that "people are going to gamble anyway, and some of that money might as well go to the Government."

Those who oppose the idea declare that gambling is a sin, that lotteries would be beneath the dignity of the United States Government, and that gambling throughout the country would be encouraged if the Government sponsored a lottery.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Torn Between Love of Girl and Fear of Marriage, Man Vacillated Until Now Her Heart Is Half Won By Another; Has He Chance of Redeeming Himself?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Three years ago, I met the young lady of this story, while she was a student at a far Western university. I courted her for six months. Our love was mutual and profound. Then I had to leave for the East, while she remained at school, where she had another year's work to complete before getting her degree. Despite my continued feeling of complete respect and affection, expressed in frequent correspondence, the normal strains caused by long separation,—after deep and full intimacy had been attained,—led to irritations, misunderstandings and some drifting apart.

The conflicts growing out of that period seem never to have completely healed. Not even after Ruth (we'll call her that) came here a year ago last June to find work, largely because of my presence here. She has been here ever since. We were still very much in love and continued so. But I had difficulty making up my mind about marriage. Fear of the institution itself, plus my unconquerable indecisiveness of character led to tense nerves for both and some unpleasantness, although I never questioned my devotion to her or hers to me.

She, of course, could not feel as sure of me, in view of my indecisiveness regarding the one subject that meant most to her. Since she was voluntarily seeing no other men,—despite opportunities aplenty, for she is an unusually attractive girl,—the situation was both disturbing and unfair to her.

Finally, in February, 1941, in accord with emotions long felt, I proposed marriage and the date was set for June. But I let her down. Why? Because I was having difficulty deciding that I was ready to give up "freedom." Actually, it was just a theory. I rarely saw other girls and did nothing about my illusory "freedom." More important, I suppose, was my supreme confidence in the inevitability (because of the "rightness") of marriage for us. I felt that nothing could stop it. And in the meantime, I was just selfishly taking time to indulge myself in this dubious freedom—which I now realize seemed desirable only because I actually had Ruth at the same time.

Only last week I finally made up my mind that I was finding delay as unpalatable as it seemed to Ruth. I wanted children before I was much older and I knew I wanted Ruth to be their mother. With proper humility, I proposed to her again, only to learn that she is considering an offer of marriage from another man,—a fine lad. She told me that our previous history had taken too much of a toll of her; that she no longer loved me; thought she loved Dick (the other man) and had just about definitely made up her mind to marry him.

She said she was going to take a few more months to get to know him better. In the interim, she does not want to see me, because she is still sufficiently fond of me to find me a disturbing influence, interfering with the full blossoming of her relationship with Dick. She wants to see him exclusively during the next few months, prior to marriage. There was not the slightest bitterness or recrimination; only intelligent realism.

And now for the query: Am I a dead duck? Or is there anything I might conceivably do to win her back, short of killing Dick (who is not a bad fellow, by the way)? Ruth is warm, kind and generous; and if Dick is at all nice to her, there is little uestion that she will learn to love him, if she sees him exclusively. She is understandably eager to be married and has been for some time.

I am not optimistic, but if you can give me a helpful steer, I shall probably take a shot at it. I am in desperation and will act accordingly, with one exception. I will do nothing which would discomfort or in any possible way hurt Ruth. I have already done more than my share of that, and would not risk injuring her further, even to spare myself. Yours sincerely, B. L. S.

There's 'No Retrieving A Wasted Chance'

DEAR B. L. S.: Your story brings to mind the lines of the poet, Laurence Hope, to wit, "The gods grant no retrieving a wasted chance. Fate knows no tears." Despite the disturbing influence your presence continues involuntarily to exert on Ruth's emotions, I believe she is telling the truth as she sees it, in saying she no longer loves you. Why? Because the love of you that she once knew was, at its prime, both inspired and nurtured by absolute confidence in your suitability and capacity to round out her life.

While this untried investment of confidence sustained her, such disappointing aspects of your personality and behavior as she encountered were condoned by her, no doubt,—on the ingenuous assumption that they were indicative more of (a) her failure to supply the "missing pieces" of an obviously imperfect relationship, than of (b) any serious intrinsic shortcomings of yours. This would explain her tirelessly adaptive, staunchly uncomplaining performance. She is one of those rarely mature personalities who expects much of herself, while imputing all of her own best qualities to others.

However, her original investment of confidence in you (an investment stemming from her predisposition to see others in her admirable image), was gradually and completely exhausted, in process of coping with your consistently self-centered or defensive behavior—which, at all bends in the road, took more account of your apprehensive feelings than her welfare. Reviewing the situation after the shock of having been "stood up," virtually at the altar, she must have seen that she, a first-rate person, was playing second fiddle to a lesser personality—without developing, so far as the record showed, anything of permanent value to either, as fruit of her sacrifice.

And in the face of that conclusion, it was inevitable that a person of her honest, idealistic, stable, courageous temperament,—whose attitude toward life will always be characterized by "joyous expectancy,"—would automatically, though unawarely, begin to look beyond the current defeating situation for better materials with which to work out her destiny. I daresay it was in that hour, when she clearly saw you to be vacillating and self centered to a callously inconsiderate degree, that she ceased,—in mind and spirit,—to be "in love" with you.

The fact that you continue to have a "disturbing effect" upon her emotions is relatively unimportant. Her confusion is strictly a reflex reaction to the memory of the "deep and full intimacy" that prevailed during the time she trustfully loved you; and a reaction that is likely to persist until she has achieved a comparable (and, let us hope, socially more valid) intimacy with another man.

Thus, I am of the opinion that she has already outgrown the relationship, to a degree that she herself does not yet realize; and I futher believe it is to her best interest,—and in line with her destiny,—to have done so. She conceives of and is suited for a finer marital relationship that she could now achieve with you,—in view of the fact that whatever potential values were implicit in your relationship in the beginning have been laid waste by your thoughtless abuse.

It is problematic what your ardently regenerate temper of today connotes. It may signify that you are, actually, on the verge of achieving tremendous psychological growth, almost overnight. Again, it may mean, simply, that you are figuratively engaged in kicking yourself over the proverbial 17 counties, for having negligently let a prize get out of your hand—a prize you never valued until you had lost it. In any event, either romance or marriage must be labeled "bad medicine" for you and the party of the second part, until after you have acquired clear, corrective insight into the reasons for your profound distrust of "the institution of marriage."

Such insight can be achieved only with the assistance of a trained analytic counsellor. And while your own attempted rationale of your previous conduct is obviously sincere, it is more a description of surface symptoms than it is a diagnosis of intrinsic causes. You say you are "unconquerably indecisive;" but why? You "fear" marriage; but why? You must have discovered and dealt constructively with the root causes of these attitudes, before you will be (as the phrase goes) "fitten" to embark upon marriage, or any preliminaries thereto, with any woman whose welfare you really cherish. It's About Time

IT'S ABOUT TIME to knit a gay vest to wear with your tweed suits or woolen sport dresses. Use wool yarn for this and then whip up matching gloves or mittens. A ribbed stitch will fit snugly and is best for this purpose

Collars Give Lingerie Touch for Spring—But Choose One to Suit Your Face

A woman with the long, thin face should avoid the V neckline. Ruffles, frills and pleatings, as the suggested square neckline, give a softening effect, also width.

The round collar is out for the round-faced girl. She should also avoid horizontal or square necklines. Most flattering is the deep V and the low collar.

If a woman has a square jaw, she should avoid a round or square neckline, choosing instead the slenderizing V to minimize squareness of jaw and to soften her face.

The woman with the oval contenance, as above, can wear any type of collar equally well, as her face is perfectly proportioned, and she usually has regular features.

Simple Rule Makes Good Posture Easy

By Ida Jean Kain

IT'S when your working hours are stretched to cover extra-career activities that you are forced to give posture its proper due. Slumping wastes energy that might not be missed in the course of a normal, eight-hour day. But as you take on more and more work the steady drain gets you down.

Of course, you can't keep your mind on your work and on a set of rules for sitting and standing while doing it. The technique has to be as automatic as shorthand or typing. But Mme. Helena Rubinstein, who has been coaching leaders in civilian defense on posture efficiency, has found one simple rule to be immediately effective.

Here it is: Control the small of your back. When you sit in a chair or car, press the small of your back against the back of the seat. In standing, pull your hips down and under to get the same effect of pushing the small of your back out.

Natural Posture

With the small of your back correctly controlled, your stomach is naturally pulled up and in where it belongs. You should never try to hold your stomach in. In the first place, you can't, and in the second, it is mechanically wrong and the attempt makes your hips stick out.

When you have the small of your back out instead of in and the hips under you, you will find yourself lifting your chest, straightening your shoulders easily, and carrying your chin level without further ado about rules. But to make sure that you are in good alignment without tension, occasionally turn your head from side to side. If you can swivel your head freely, Mme. Rubinstein says you can be certain that your shoulders are relaxed and that your posture line-up is correct.

Get those ideas straight and you can begin this minute to cut down on the waste of energy caused by an inefficient posture.

Busy as you are, you may be dead set against an exercise routine. If so, it is up to you to move in the best posture possible. Every time you sit, which may easily be several hundred times a day, think to hold your trunk erect, have one foot slightly advanced, and make your hip muscles do the work of lowering you into the sitting position. And when you get up, put your hip muscles to work again.

Stairway Exercise

You can exercise the same important muscle groups as you climb stairs or enter your car—just do what you are doing in good posture: small of back out, hips under.

For good measure, Mme. Rubinstein says to make a practice of walking now and then with your toes turned in. That strengthens your arches and has a generally good effect on your posture. She declares it's a trick the movie stars use for making their hiplines appear slimmer, so you needn't worry about attracting unfavorable attention.

But you should realize that a few daily calisthenics are a necessity. If you want to apply these to posture correction, choose the stretching and limbering kind. Nothing is easier or better than simply lying on the back on the floor, knees flexed, feet close to buttocks, and pressing small of back against a wall, heels a few inches out, knees slightly flexed, press the small of the back and entire spine flat against the wall, then droop trunk forward, still keeping back of hips against wall.

Touches of white on dark ensembles are traditional for spring, but they are more important than ever this season. Since certain styles will be more becoming than others for different shapes of faces, the right and wrong suggestions (at top) are offered as advised by Fashion Accessories Magazine. Above, Madaline ("Miss Blue") Lee, of the "Amos 'n' Andy" series, perks up her black dress with a white pique collar. Since Miss Blue has regular features, she can wear virtually any shape of neckline.

Tips on Figuring Your Income

ARE YOU still in doubt about the amount of your new income tax—wondering if your figure is too much or too little, if you have taken the right deductions?

With correct information before you, much that seems confused will become clear.

If your gross income is not more than $3000, you can use the Government's new simplified tax form, which allows you 10 per cent for deductions. But, like the man we know, you may find you have more than 10 per cent. Instead of paying $42 on a $1250 income, he pays $25.69.

In this case, use the regular tax form, listing your deductions. Here are some that are allowed.

Q. Can I deduct the tax on my home which I own and live in?

A. Yes. Personal property, admissions, auto registration are some taxes you can deduct.

Q. Under deductions the tax form lists "interest paid." What does this cover?

A. Interest on any debt—including mortgages, loans. List each payment and to whom made.

Q. I support my wife and mother-in-law. Are both classed as dependents?

A. No, not your wife, for you get a $1500 exemption as a married man. You are allowed $400 additional for your mother-in-law or any other dependent.

Q. Can I deduct the expenses on my car, used in business,

A. Yes, if you are not reimbursed by your company. If you use a car for business and pleasure, expenses should be apportioned on a time or mileage basis.

Complete directions for making out your income tax are given in our 40-page booklet, "How to Figure Your Income Tax." Tells how much exemption you get if single, married, head of a family. Explains rulings for businessmen, professional men, farmers. Includes simplified tax table, chart for preliminary figuring.

Send 15 cents (plus 1 cent to cover cost of mailing) for our boklet, "How to Figure Your Income Tax," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Priceless Fan

Helpful Hints For Polishing Home Fixtures

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

POLISHED metal gives a house the appearance of being all slicked up. . . . remember how glowingly tourists used to talk about the gleaming brass door knobs and knockers of Holland. That same well-cared for look comes to a room that has all its metal accessories bright and shining. That's not such a hard job as it sounds—if you know how. But don't try to use the same polish on all metals—here are some suggestions for cleaning various familiar metals.

To Polish Silver

For silver, use a reliable brand of mild polish, applied with a soft rag or sponge, or with a soft brush for the fancy places. . . . and lots of hot water. Never use stiff brushes, steel wool or abrasives.

For copper and brass, you can use a commercial polish, or else you can take a piece of lemon dipped in salt and rub it to a fine glitter.

Your fine chromium ware and all chromium faucets and hardware need only to be washed with soap and water and then wiped and dried thoroughly. If not wiped dry, it will show water marks.

If your aluminum has darkened, clean with a fine abrasive, such as pumice or steel wool. For pewter use finely powdered pumice or rottenstone mixed with whiting and water.

As For Stains

Another chemical job by which the fastidious homemaker may be gauged is the removing of stains. They happen in the best of families, and here are some precautions to observe: Don't set stain permanently by ironing or dipping in hot water. Some stains of course come out with hot water but be sure about this before you start.

A good dry cleaner is probably the best bet for precious fabrics. Remove chewing gum by applying egg white, then washing; or else use carbon tetrachloride and then water. Coffee stains come out of washable fabrics by the use of (1) soap and water, (2) Javelle water—but not on wool or silk, (3) potassium permanganate in water—(1 teaspoon to a pint).

Bride's Mother's Hat

A FRIEND of mine is having a large church wedding at night. Her mother will, of course, wear a full-length gown. Should she wear a hat?

EXCEPTING in Catholic and Episcopal Churches, a head covering is not required. In general, a woman dresses for a formal night church wedding just as he would for any other formal evening occasion. However, if she prefers to wear some kind of miniature version of a hat, such as a Juliet cap, this is permissible.

The dress should have a high neck and long or three-fourths length sleeves. The jacket dress is a perfect choice. A wrap is also worn. The bride's mother will wear the corsage given her by the bridegroom.

All-Season Coat

I NEED a dressy-type cloth coat to wear now and into spring until suit weather. I have a fur coat and a sport coat. The coat I buy should be the type that I could also wear next fall and winter. Do you have any suggestions for a coat that would fit into any season?

ALTHOUGH that is a big order, there are untrimmed coats available that would serve for varied purposes and seasons—if you are content to do without "flash." Since blue is now an all-year-around color, it might be your first choice. Do not select navy blue, but one of the more wintry grayed blues, such as the "defense blue" of last season. It goes well with virtually every color from winter browns and blacks to strident spring hues.

If you wear black, there is no limit to your choice. Black coats are more in abundance than any other color. And in spite of the fact that black is said to be frowned upon in wartime, it is one of the wisest choices for long time wear. Bright colored accessories, especially gay hats, can always enliven it.

There also are neutral coats with fur trims that may be worn with varied colors. Oatmeal weaves, tweeds or heather tones that are indistinct are practical choices. These have a tendency to look sporty, however, unless they are kept simple. They are usually box coats, while many of the untrimmed coats are fitted.

Above all other details, look for a coat with sauvely simple lines and slit or patch pockets for trimming. Choose buttons that are undecorated and take off extraneous trimming. All-wool fabrics are still available. Those of flat weaves will be more lasting.

Low Heels for Dress

NOW that I work more hours a day and more days a week, I need comfortable, low-heeled shoes. I don't want walking shoes or sport shoes, but dressy, low-heeled shoes the kind I would nc. mind wearing out to dinner after work. Can you tell me whether or not the stores are showing such shoes? I have not been successful in finding them in the past.

AFTER a recent browsing about shoe departments and shoe shops. I find that Utopian low-heeled shoes in dressy styles are actually available. The heels generally are slightly lower and broader than the spectator types of heels. These shoes are available in spring colors—turf tan, red, green, blue and other shades of brown. Polished calfs, reptiles and gained leathers are shown.

Very likeable are the new, low-heeled wedge shoes. There are comportable open toe versions, nail studded types and cylinder and buckle trim varieties. They are out of the casual shoe category because they look dressy. Wedge shoes are available in various colors, but the red ones are especially attractive. (And fashion magazines tell us that every girl is going to have one pair of red shoes in her wardrobe this spring.)

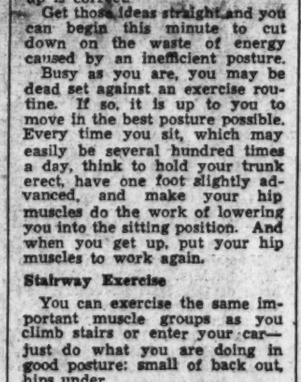
Lucy Monroe Keeps Fit Through Sensible Diet



LUCY MONROE

MISS Lucy Monroe, Star Spangled Banner soprano, who is now on a year's concert tour for the United States Treasury Department, in the interest of the sale of Defense bonds, has mastered the problem of eating wisely although constantly on the jump. Miss Monroe sang the National Anthem last night at Uline Arena at President Roosevelt's golden jubilee celebration.

In spite of the fact that she does not get much exercise, Miss Monroe controls her weight and maintains good health by watching her diet. "I eat as few starches as possible," she explained. By that I do not mean that I don't eat bread. I eat whole wheat bread with butter."

The singer starts the day off with orange juice or fresh fruit, a cereal and milk—she never drinks coffee. She doesn't think the expected sugar shortage will be a hardship on her for she does not use much sugar. She amplified this current news bit with the thought, "we have always had so much of everything, while others are having so little, that we Americans will not be making great sacrifices."

Miss Monroe is an exponent of the theory that one should always leave the table just a little hungry. Starch desserts, such as pastry, are not of her food preferences. She likes fresh fruit for dessert, or as she says, "I love dried fruit such as figs, raisins and prunes. And I always drink a glass of milk before going to bed."

Steak cooked rare, a baked potato, a green vegetable, a fresh fruit dessert with milk as the beverage, is a dinner menu built according to Miss Monroe's specifications. She does not like highly seasoned foods and is not an enthusiast of foreign foods, saying that traditionally American foods give her the greatest pleasure.

Festive Banquet at Willard Climaxes President's Birthday Celebrations

North Wales Scene Of Brilliant Ball In Hunt Country

By Carolyn Bell

All Washington—in a variety of ways—celebrated President Roosevelt's birthday last night. Climaxing the festivities was the banquet given at the Willard attended by a galaxy of movie stars . . . high-ranking service officers . . . diplomats and residentials.

Sometime later North Wales, the home of Walter P. Chrysler in Warrenton, was the scene of one of the largest balls ever given in the Hunt Country. A caravan of Washingtonians — mostly younger set—made the 40-mile trip in a procession of cars. All in all the annual celebration (proceeds of course to the infantile paralysis fund) was one of the most successful in many a year.

More than 500 guests were on hand in the flag-festooned ballroom of the Willard for the banquet. Guests gathered shortly after 6 o'clock for the reception that preceded the dinner. Very much in evidence was Mrs. John Allan Dougherty, who as chairman of the hostess committee was responsible for the smooth-running performance.

Field Day for Autograph Hounds

With jolly Edward Arnold as master of ceremonies the dinner got off to a gala start. He was introduced by the toastmaster for the evening, Gen. Albert L. Cox. Although the stars were seated at the seakers' table to make "ogling" easier, there was much peering going on from their table, as Washington too has its "personalities." A fence of red carnations, blue larkspur and white blooms ran the length of the speakers' table, at which were also seated Washington's three Commissioners, J. Russell Young, Guy Mason and Gen. Charles Kutz. It looked like an autograph hound's field day. The red, white and blue motif was used throughout and a huge picture of President Roosevelt dominated the stage where Meyer Davis' orchestra played. Dinah Shore and Conrad Thibault sang several selections during the evening.

At a large table, centered with bright blooms, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Harold R. Stark were hosts to a group. Their guests included the Chief of Staff and Mrs. George C. Marshall, the Assistant Secretary of Navy and Mrs. Ralph A. Bard, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stettinius, Mrs. Harold P. Gillespie, Field Marshal Sir John Dill, of the British army, and Admiral and Lady Little.

Jesse Joneses With Rockefellers

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller entertained a company of 10, having among their guests the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones and Dr. Luthero Sarmanho Vargas, son of the President of Brazil, and Mme. Vargas. Before the dinner, the Rockfellers met their guests for cocktails at the 1925 F Street Club.

Mrs. Albert L. Cox had as her guests, Gen. and Mrs. Albert J. Bowley, of Baltimore, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Francis Cox, of Alexandria. Following the dinner, Gen. and Mrs. Cox invited a number of friends to drop in for an informal party at their home on Ellicott Street.

Diplomats were very much in evidence at the dinner. Lord and Lady Halifax were there and the Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Litvinoff were hosts to six guests. The South African Minister and Mrs. Close had a table for four. The Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy had in their party their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy, who later joined the group going down to Warrenton. Also at their table were the Counselor of the legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, the Second Secretary of the legation and Mrs. Hector Allard, and Wing Comdr. and Mrs. John Norton.

College-Trained Women Prove Valuable in Overcoming War Apathy, A.A.U.W. Head Finds

IN TRAVELING about the country—cities and hinterlands—Dr. Helen C. White, scholarly, alert president of the American Association of University Women, has found college-trained women especially effective in overcoming defense and war apathy.

Dr. Helen C. White

As an example, she cited the fact that A. A. U. W. clubs in various cities had opened their meetings to the public; also, the clubs are promoting blood banks and keeping in touch with FBI officials in regard to aliens' movements and activities.

Here to conduct the national board meeting of the A. A. U. W. convening today at local headquarters, Dr. White remarked, "I am amazed and impressed to find so many women in all sections of the United States giving anonymous, selfless service to defense. The usual self aggrandizement seeking seems to be absent."

In discussing the part that A. A. U. W. clubs are playing in the national defense program, Dr. White, author of "A Watch in the Night," "Not Built With Hands" and several other critical studies, pointed out that the various clubs are doing a great deal to build up the morale of women moving into new communities. "Jerked up from familiar surroundings," she said, "hordes of women are being transplanted because of the defense program. Many find it difficult to adjust themselves to strange conditions and their morale ebbs low."

Urging women to keep their heads in the crisis, Dr. White said, "In a crucial time such as this, the A. A. U. W. can do certain things to help . . . but we must keep our heads . . . we can keep our sanity if we keep our perspective."

A time of challenge, she explained, is a time nobody asks for. But, she pointed out, it is a time when people have a chance to use whatever talents they have. Any gift anybody can make will be appreciated.

"There are certain things we will go on doing, no matter what happens," she said. "Keep on studying. Remember that the key slogan of the totalitarian states is action. The best guarantee against that is study . . . we must be adaptable, practical and homely."

President Signs Price Control, Calls Measure 'Workable' Law

others—taxes, savings, rationing—to prevent inflation.

The framework it contemplates of placing powers in a single administrator is good, he said, as are the rent provisions, which allow the administrator to step into local housing situations where costs have grown out of hand. Also useful and important, he added, were the powers of buying and selling commodities on the open market to control price fluctuations. The provisions governing the setting of maximum prices on nonagricultural items were also good, he said.

But the real danger, he added quickly, lies in the provision that no price may be established below 110 per cent of parity. Explaining that parity was a relationship between the thing the farmer sells to the things he buys, the Chief Executive warned that a price higher than parity was a threat of a rising cost of living for all.

A Workable Act

Discussing both the assets and disadvantages of the bill in a formal statement, the President declared:

"The act, taken all in all, is a workable one. It accomplishes the fundamental objectives of setting up a single administrator, and empowering him to establish maximum prices and rents over a broad field, to prohibit related speculative and manipulative practices, and to buy and sell commodities in order to obtain the maximum production. To make price and rent control effective, the administrator is given adequate powers to license persons subject to the act, to investigate and enjoin attempted violations, and to bring about the commencement of criminal proceedings against violators. Civil suits for treble damages by private persons provide an additional enforcement tool."

Amendments Forecast

He added that the law imposed on the price administrator responsibility for fair play equal to the broad powers given him, and enjoined him to consult with members of the industry before setting ceilings. It also provides an emergency court of appeals to remedy adverse effects of the rulings, he noted.

Insisting that there was nothing in the act which prevented farmers from receiving a fair return, he added that "most farmers realize that when farm prices go much above parity, danger is ahead."

He repeated that amendments to the law, presumably on the controversial farm-price issue, might be sought in the future.

Henderson, meantime, is expected to move quickly into the field of retail prices, acting under his new authority. Action, which the President said might be patterned after the District rent-control procedure, is also expected in defense areas where rents have skyrocketed.

transfer powers to the loan of warships and to limit to two billion dollars the total value of other war materials which may be transferred.

Under normal procedure in the Senate, such a provision in an appropriations bill is not likely to be subject to elimination on a point of order. This procedure, however, is observed in the House where unanimous consent is required for legislation in an appropriation measure and where there has been stronger sentiment against lend-lease policies.

President's Requests

In addition to his supplemental estimates for airplanes, the President asked the subcommittee to increase proposed appropriations for ship maintenance and manufacture of aircraft guns and armor by 329 million dollars and $896,300,000, respectively. He also asked that the House bill be increased by 615 million dollars for ship maintenance in 1943.

The subcommittee quickly granted all requests, and then added an extra 500 million dollars in contract authority for the Bureau of Yards and Docks, the money to be obligated for public works and mobile equipment.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, subcommittee chairman, said the record measure may be considered by the Senate Monday.

Shortly before the subcommittee acted yesterday, President Roosevelt signed a War Department appropriation of $12,555,872,474, of which all but $30,800,000 will be spent for expansion of the Army air force by 23,000 combat and 10,000 training airplanes. The bill also provides 30 million for construction of Douglas Dam and $800,000 for the State Department.

"Supremacy in Air"

While the largest single item in the Navy measure remains the $8,206,760,385 allotted for construction of warships, including airplane carriers, submarines and cruisers, Overton declared that additions for aircraft and aerial armament "should assure us supremacy in the air as well as on the sea."

"They have asked us," he added, "not to disclose the exact number of airplanes they expect to build, but I guess even a Jap could figure that out."

Tires Urged for Auto Service Crews

Inclusion of the emergency road repair equipment operated by the 55,000 service establishments in the United States in the list of vehicles eligible to obtain tires under the rationing program was urged yesterday by the American Automobile Association. During 1941, it was pointed out, approximately 36,500,000 car breakdowns occurred, requiring emergency service. "With older cars and older tires, may we not well anticipate a higher volume of breakdowns?" said the A. A. A., pointing to the dangers from stalled cars on streets and highways.

President Suggests 'Parasites' Quit D.C.

Proposes Those Here For 'Fun' Make Way for Workers

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday suggested that overcrowding in the District of Columbia could be eased considerably if all the "parasites" left town.

Priorities of living space in the Federal area should go, he said, to persons essential to the war effort. There is no place under the Potomac sun, the Chief Executive indicated, for people here merely "to watch the show," participate in social events, or live with too much space around them in 20-room homes on Massachusetts Avenue.

He said Defense Housing Coordinator Charles F. Palmer had told him that non-essential persons should be asked to move so there would be room for thousands of war workers coming to the city with no prospect of adequate housing facilities in sight. The President recalled that he has the power to take over hotels, apartments and even residences if that drastic step should be required.

Some Don't Do a Lick

During World War days, when he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy, the President declared, conditions were similar and Washington was filled with people—many of them friends of his—who had come just to have a good time. They didn't do a lick of work, he added, and actually clogged the war work of the Government.

Statisticians in Palmer's office said the "parasites" might run into thousands. It was stressed, however, that Coordinator Palmer did not have in mind anybody who contributed to Government, civic or business life in the District.

"As everybody knows," it was said, "there live in Washington a sizable number of people who live here primarily just because they want to live here."

A reaction of disbelief to the get-out-of-here suggestion started Thursday when Palmer first made it before the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, and yesterday was boiling up rapidly. "Preposterous," absurd," "I don't get it" and "just a way to get some housing money" were some off-the-record exclamations at the District Building.

One official remarked there are between 20 and 30 boarding schools for girls he supposed could be taken over for dormitory space, but declared he knew of thousands of vacant acres right in the edge of town with plenty of utilities where demountable homes could be built quickly and inexpensively.

Florida Was Haven in 1917

During the World War, he said, lots of people did leave Washington—but voluntarily and "to get out of all the hurly-burly." Most of them went to Florida, he declared.

"Too ridiculous for comment" was the way the President's suggestion was greeted by John A. Saul, president of the Society of Natives. "However," Saul added, "we'll take it up at our February meeting." He said estimates placed the number of native Washingtonians living in the District at around 200,000.

A check of hotels revealed that some of them have been gradually eliminating "parasites" for several months by having no apartments available, when, for example, rich widows show up for the winter social season.

They said that the pressure from defense and war workers was so great they also had eased out a lot of former customers. Not always, some of them admitted, was their action due wholly to patriotism. One can get more for an apartment by dividing it up into office space and single rooms, they pointed out.

Also, one of them said, it's a matter of pride with them to be able to produce "22 single rooms when somebody like Winston Churchill comes to town." Old tenants are not nearly so exciting as the newcomers often prove to be, it was stated.

"Impractical," Says Texan

Representative Russell (Democrat), of Texas, called the moving out plan "impractical," declaring he did not believe efficiency in the Government depended on people having to leave their homes. "There is greater need to be thinking about staffing the Philippines," he declared, "than to be staffing Washington any more."

Representative Manasco (Democrat), of Alabama, said he thought it would be "a most tragic mistake" to think about moving people out of their Washington homes.

Coordinator Palmer's "threat" about moving out nonproductive citizens came when he was asking 50 million dollars to build 10,000 more homes here immediately for low-income war workers. He said the Government is increasing so rapidly there seems to be no practical way of keeping up with it on a construction basis.

Lack of power lines, sewage facilities and other utilities was given as a belief new structures might not solve the entire problem.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, announced yesterday that Defense Homes Corporation has contracted to purchase property at Third and U Streets Northwest, near Howard University, for erection of a three-story and basement hotel for colored women Government workers. The hotel will contain approximately 300 rooms and recreational facilities.

This move is in accord with plans announced several weeks ago by Coordinator Palmer—who has had his program clogged on two fronts. Funds for 3,500 homes for low-income groups were not forthcoming because the Lanham Act excluded Government workers from war-work provisions.

The 10,000 homes he asked private owners to erect in Washington are "moving slowly" because builders claim they have met rebuffs with efforts to secure the promise of materials. Since the homes have to be for war workers and must rent for $50 a month or sell for $6,000, there is not enough margin of profit to justify the worry," some of them claim.

Theme Song of the Secret Six

By Elizabeth Henney

Oh, the Lord High Executioner has got a little list
Of those who won't be missed,
Who Never would be missed!
Of parasites and sycophants and hangers-on—the gist
Is they simply won't be Missed.
That's why he's made the list!

There's the gay "retired" Senator
Who's fond of being kissed
He never would be missed,
We're Sure he won't be missed!
The amply padded dowager
With her "little dinner" list
Her face will not be missed
And how!—it won't be missed.

The lobbyist, the New-Yorkese, The Georgetown "Cavey-ist,"
The hat-check girl, the doorman and the waitress with a lisp,
The guy who'll "get it wholesale" if you put him on your list
They'll none of them be missed!
Let's put them on the list!

The ones who "know" that Washington's "the only place to live,"
The "benefit" proponent whose daily chant is "give"
And visiting Aunt Minnies who're fond of playing Whist!
Let's add them to the list!
Quite good, that little list.

The gals who get "Defense Jobs," to wear a uniform,
The Leagues-for-better-living where the meetings end in storm,
The "Do-make-a-speech," arranger, whom you simply can't resist,
Quick, get them on the list!
Where did I put that list?

There's the "Alimony-lady" with her mink and ermine muff,
The mouth-piece politician whose "cut" brings you your stuff,
The hand-shaking offender, whose grasp will break your wrist,
They're perfect for the list!
A good idea, that list.

The patronizing tea-hound who rouses all your ire,
The cycle-cop who stops you and says "Going to a fire?"
The bore who talks your ear off and simply won't desist,
They must be on the list.
Boy, isn't this a list?

The "Avenue" home-owner with a house like Union Station
Who'll have to "put-away" five cars, now tires are on a ration.
The referees, the umpires, those who'll "fix it with a twist,"
There's no end to this list!
Who isn't on the list!

Gain Motive In Wartime Bans Decried

U. S. Official Fails To See Sugar Saving in Charge For 2d Cup of Coffee

Firms which restrict services to consumers because of defense priorities regulations should pass on resultant savings to their customers rather than make the changes a basis for higher prices, Donald E. Montgomery, consumers counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, said yesterday.

Montgomery commented on reports he has received from all over the United States that services to consumers have been restricted in many places to save gasoline, automobile parts, rubber tires and other essential materials.

"All these steps are fine," he said, "but I think it is time to ask whether the consumers will benefit from the economies these changes create."

Specifically, he took issue with Washington restaurateurs who have decided to ration sugar to their customers by charging them five cents for the second cup of coffee that was formerly provided free as a service.

"That really amounts to charging the customers $5 for a pound of sugar and has the effect of penalizing people of limited means," he said.

"Now, if there is enough sugar for a second cup of coffee, the restaurant customer is entitled to get it. However, if sugar is scarce, the fairer way would be to serve a free second cup of coffee to persons willing to take it without sugar. I cannot see how the sugar shortage could justify the price rise, however."

He said he understood that some restaurants had adopted the procedure he suggested. He pointed out that the cost of a cup of coffee has risen only 14 hundredths of a cent since August 1939.

Other service curtailment mentioned by Montgomery included restriction in milk delivery service in several cities and the decision of Washington laundries to ask customers to save the drivers needless trips.

Battered Ships Theme of Navy Art Exhibit

Drawings of seven battered British warcraft in American drydocks and navy yards are part of a collection of national defense subjects being shown at the Corcoran Gallery under authorization of the Navy Department.

The exhibition comprises 67 drawings and water colors by the veteran artist, Vernon Howe Bailey, who made a similar record of Navy activity in the World War, now at the Smithsonian Institution.

Center pieces of the show are two pictures of the battleship Duke of York, which brought Winston Churchill to America last month.

Shown in drydock are the battleships Malaya and Rodney and the British submarine, Pandora. Other lend-lease visitors pictured are the aircraft carriers Illustrious and Formidable and the cruisers Manchester and Delhi.

Bailey made two drawings of the huge Free French submarine Surcouf—so big that it carries an airplane in the conning tower—when it visited the Portsmouth Navy Yard.

One tall sketch shows the towering prow of the new United States battleship Alabama. This picture illustrated the invitations to the launching of the vessel at Norfolk.

Secretaries Knox and Stimson and members of the British and other embassies have been invited to a preview of the exhibition this afternoon. The show will be open to the public until February 19.

Capital Schools Wind Up Commencement Exercises

Lists of Honor Students, Speakers Are Released

The present war, the pleasant past and uncertainties of the future, were mingled in excited talk in 13 senior and junior high schools where midyear commencement exercises, begun in the public school system Thursday, were concluded yesterday.

White high schools graduated 798 students, Negro high schools 198, white junior high schools graduated 1195 and Negro junior highs 546. Twenty-four students were graduated from the Chamberlain Vocational School.

McKinley High

At McKinley High the students set aside $100 for a memorial to be made—if occasion arises—to McKinley students losing their lives in the war. The graduates numbered 152 and were addressed by Charles D. Drayton, of the Board of Education. Charles Edward Lowe, who had distinguished himself as a debater and in other school activities, was the valedictorian and, with Catherine Verdie Coleman, received the American Legion Award. Charles William James Kissinger was salutatorian. Richard Athey Sisson, jr., was class president.

Central High

The valedictory was delivered by Elizabeth Johnston to a class of 129 at Central High School. Scholarships were awarded Irving Fox and Aletha George following a brief address by Dr. Carroll R. Reed, first assistant superintendent of schools. Abe Brenner was class historian, Hubert Quintan Tucker, jr., class president; Elizabeth Aleene Jordan, secretary; Fae Lee Lasky, vice president, and Josephine Gillespie, treasurer.

Powell Junior High

Catherine Harris delivered the valedictory address at Powell Junior High School and, with James Henry Murdock, received the American Legion award. Eighty-four students were graduated, following an address by Boise L. Bristor, of the Franklin School statistical office. The graduates were presented by Lester T. Walter, principal. Virginia Kessler was the salutatorian. D. A. R. awards went to John Dassoulas and Mary Alys Huston, the latter vice president of the class.

Woodrow Wilson High

Marjorie Wade, Eleanor Smith, Marjorie Walker, Elizabeth Avery and Lois Higgins were the five highest-ranking students of the class at Woodrow Wilson High School. The class of 55 graduates was addressed by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and the valedictory was given by Eleanor Smith. Norman J. Nelson, the principal, presented the class. The American Legion awards went to John Mudd and Frances Haller.

ROOSEVELT HIGH

Civilian Air Patrol Unit Takes Form

Fleet of Privately Owned Planes Forms Nucleus of Squadron To Serve D. C. Area

A group of ambitious civilian pilots and other aviation enthusiasts in the Washington area have started to form a civil air patrol squadron to do observation, courier, ferrying and other civilian defense work in cooperation with the Army Air Corps, Miss Katherine Keeler, squadron information and public relations officer, disclosed yesterday.

Miss Keeler, who is one of several women pilots in the local squadron, said first flight maneuvers would be held tomorrow at Congressional Airport, squadron headquarters, outside of Bethesda.

Providing the nucleus are 21 privately owned planes kept at Congressional Airport and 77 qualified civilian pilots. Others will be needed to provide ground crews and supplement the pilot force, Miss Keeler said.

The group is a division of the Maryland State Flight Command. Its territory includes all of Washington and adjacent parts of Maryland.

Nationally, Civil Air Patrols have been organized under the supervision of Maj. Gen. John Curry, who was assigned to the job by the Army Air Corps.

Miss Keeler said the group expects to complete its training program at its own expense.

Owning her plane, Miss Keeler said she was spending most of her time qualifying to become a flight instructor. Last August she received her pilot's license in Chicago.

Nazis Attempted To Halt Guiana Bauxite Exports

Scuttling their ship in the channel of the Surinam River on the day the German armies invaded the Netherlands, German sailors tried to block vital shipments of bauxite (aluminum ore) from Surinam, Dutch Guiana, Nicol Smith, traveler and lecturer, told members of the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall.

Fortunately the German vessel sank to one side of the main river channel, Smith said, and shipments of aluminum ore from Surinam continue to supply 60 per cent of the United States' needs. Smith, recently returned from Surinam, told how United States troops now are guarding the bauxite deposits in the South American colony of the Netherlands.

Smith stopped off in the French island of Martinique on his way to Surinam. He said United States naval units keep a perpetual watch over the French cruiser Emile Bertin and the aircraft carrier Bearn which are immobilized in the harbor of Martinique, and $368,400,000 worth of French gold stored which was destined for American munition and airplane manufacturers early in the war.

'Bedtime Story,' at Earle, Is Anything But a Sedative

Fredric March and Loretta Young Costar In Marital Comedy of the First Rank; Sammy Kaye Triumphs Again on the Stage

BY THE FINAL FADEOUT of "Bedtime Story," yesterday's first audience at the Earle Theater had roared itself into a state of complete and happy collapse. The ensuing short subjects, however—while by no means soporific—afforded time to regain enough spent energy and enthusiasm to accord Sammy Kaye and His Swing and Sway Orchestra, the band's specialists and the stage bill's added acts as tumultuous a welcome as the screen feature had received. Whether appraised by sections or en toto, it was a sockdolager of an entertainment.

Many earlier plays on both screen and stage—"Mr. and Mrs. Smith," "The Royal Family," "Stage Door," "You Belong to Me," "Appointment for Love," Guy Bolton's dramatization of Somerset Maugham's "Theater" etc., etc.—have utilized, in part, the elements of romance, comedy and action that vitalize "Bedtime Story" and its over-all formula practically in full, but none ever with more telling or cumulatively hilarious effect than this screen adaptation by Richard Flournoy of a story by Horace Jackson and Grant Garrett, directed by Alexander Hall with Fredric March and Loretta Young as his costars.

It is the familiar fable of the successful playwright and his actress-wife and the impasse that is reached through the conflict of their professional and domestic careers that bobs up here again, fresh and fragrant as a new blown rose and not half so perishable. He wants to keep on grinding out a succession of hits as stellar vehicles for his wife's enormously popular talents. She wants to retire from it all at the peak of their powers and pursue the simple pastoral life on a Connecticut farm.

So They "Compromised"!

The compromise that eventually smoothes the corduroy road of their connubial caterwauling is arrived at through many delightful vagaries, including the divorce court and a comedy "spite marriage" that paves the way for an uproarious climax that takes on the general proportions of the Battle of Britain. This is where the abandoned husband interrupts the newlyweds' honeymoon by sending all of the waiters, electricians, chambermaids, plumbers, exterminators, porters, desk clerks and an inebriated mob of cockeyed conventioneers to their hotel suite on an emergency call!

That is merely the high point. Throughout its length, "Bedtime Story"—that is the name of one of Lucius Drake's plays, by the way—is deftly written, cleverly developed, maturely comic and superlatively well played.

If Fredric March had not scored his first hit in this sort of thing in "The Royal Family," he would do it in his present assignment. His serio-comic portrayal of the preoccupied playwright is as shrewdly drawn—at the theater's opposite pole—as his memorable characterization of the patient cleric in "One Foot in Heaven," which stamps him as one of the most competent and versatile of all the cinema's actors. Loretta Young is no less vibrant, volatile and volcanic in the role of Jane Drake, the great star. Their talents weave themselves into a perfect pattern of marital devotion and discord. And they are supported by a whale of a cast. Robert Benchley, as the best friend of the family; Allyn Joslyn, the odd angle in the triangle; Helen Westley, Eve Arden and Joyce Compton, as three harassed members of the Drake acting company; Clarence Kolb, Andrew Tombes and all the rest catch the spirit of the frolic in faultless fashion.

"Swing and Sway" Still Tops

Sammy Kaye and His Swing and Sway Orchestra, one of the "sweetest" bands before the public, of course dominates, but does not monopolize, the Earle's new stage revue. Their numbers are many and varied, always melodious and never blatant, with Allen Foster, Maury Cross and Tommy Ryan contributing vocals, frequently supported by the Glee Club, that are on a high parity of excellence. The "Do You Want to Lead a Band?" innovation is an outlet for local ambitions that caught on quickly yesterday and will be continued throughout the week's engagement by local contestants. In "Three Smart Girls," the bill has precisely that. Their dances and acrobatics registered a hit only second to Sue Ryan's in her comedy song interlude that crowds Gracie Fields' a little more closely than any other we know of. All very de luxe pastiming.

The short subjects are notable. Foremost among them is the Government reel emphasizing the danger of loose talk in times of war. With a cast headed by Walter Huston and including Eddie Albert, this item on "Military Information" and the evils of divulging it is as valuable as it is entertaining and well done. A Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy in color, "The Bird Came C. O. D.," is not the best one ever, but has its moments. The newsreel, with emphasis on Leon Henderson, sugar and the infantile paralysis drive, completes a program that packed them in and sent them out "punch drunk" yesterday. That will be the order of the week.

Never Mind, Mister, It's That Way With All of Us!

FREDRIC MARCH AND LORETTA YOUNG in the costellar roles of the brilliant young playwright and his actress-wife, in Columbia's production of "Bedtime Story," now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Robert Benchley, Helen Westley, Eve Arden, Allyn Joslyn and a long list of others support the stars in this hilarious new comedy of clashing temperaments and steadfast devotion

Broadway Glossary

New York, Jan. 30.

POMP: A prominent actress who is an official of the American Theater Wing wears a different uniform at each meeting of that war relief organization. Valentina, the designer, observed the frequency with which she changes these uniforms . . . "Well, girls," Valentina whispered to her comembers, "she's the Goering of the American Theater Wing."

WILLIAM SAROYAN

CHANGE: Maxim Litvinoff and his wife posed for a photographer from Click Magazine at the Russian Embassy in Washington. Litvinoff was questioned about his diplomatic appointment and its interpretation. "Many people say that your appointment is an admission by Stalin that he was wrong in dropping your policy of collective security," the interviewer suggested . . . "On the contrary," replied the Ambassador. "It's proof that the policy had never really been discarded."

CHANCE: In Samson Raphaelson's "Jason" the Saroyanish playwright, who is broke, starts a dice game with the drama critic and wins. That scene wasn't based upon fancy. In the Stork Club last spring William Saroyan joined a table at which sat Dick Maney, the publicist, and Critics Richard Watts and Woollcott Gibbs. Saroyan proposed a game—flipping for $100 side bets. He won the first toss, but lost the second. And he had but $8 on his person . . . He later enticed the critics into another game of chance and won from them.

CHATTER: The publisher of a New York Sunday newspaper which has consistently pursued an anti-British policy has been subpenaed to appear before the Federal grand jury investigating Nazi propaganda . . . Floyd Odlum may become a member of the Board of Economic Warfare . . . If the Treasury Department ever starts recalling pennies, to use the copper for our arms program, Producer John Golden has a new collection of 4015. He received them from Commissioner William F. Carey, who lost the money to Golden at gin rummy .. . "Political World," in reviewing the Democratic gubernatorial possibilities in New York, will announce that the logical choice is Oscar Ewing, who conducted the Eastern campaign for Roosevelt in 1940. Ewing once was a law partner of a former New York Governor —Charles Evans Hughes.

DONATION: Norman Weiser, author of "The Writer's Radio Theater of 1940-41," received a notice from his draft board to appear for his physical examination at a Riverside Drive hospital . . . Weiser appeared there and was duly examined. The doctor who tested his blood asked him, "Are you in a hurry now?" . . . "No," said Weiser . . . "We have a serious case upstairs, and your blood matches," said the doctor. "How about it?" . . . Two hours later Weiser left the hospital minus a pint of blood and plus an okay on his physical examination.

DEFICIT: Tiffany Thayer has received an unusual royalty statement from John Long, his English publisher. For the first time in Thayer's long, successful career his royalty statement showed its figures in red . . . The statement reported: "Destroyed (Enemy Action), 'Thirteen Men,' 338 copies; 'One Woman,' 1200 copies; 'Call Her Savage,' 1250 copies."

SUCCESS: In 1938 two 14-year-old girls, Glynis Johns and Corinne Luchaire, appeared in a movie, "Prison Without Bars." The girls became attached to each other and confided their ambitions. "I want to become a great actress," said Glynis, the English girl . . . "I want to be a great lady," said Corinne, the French girl. "I want to preside over a great salon in Paris" . . . This week in New York the new picture, "The Invaders," was previewed. Its feminine star, appearing opposite Laurence Olivier, Leslie Howard and Raymond Massey, is Glynis Johns. This week the newspapers also reported that Corinne Luchaire had become Paris' No. 1 hostess—as the mistress of Otto Abetz.

EXERCISE: Rome Vincent, the 298-pound singer, escorted his wife to the Gay Blades and watched her ice skate. Some friends tried to tempt him into joining them on the rink. "Oh, no, not me," said the paunchy Vincent. "I'm fit as a bass fiddle."

Metropolitan

Proving that insults can be profitable rovided the are itt," The Man Who Came to Dinner" holds his own for another week at the Metropolitan.

Fear of also being made the subject of Messrs. Kaufman's and Hart's darts keeps any sagacious man from relating any more of "The Man Who Came to Dinner" at so late a date as this. It would take a rash spirit to remind anyone that it concerns a captious lecturer forced to inflict his devastating remarks on an innocent family simply because he slipped on its icy front steps. Nor is it necessary to observe that Monty Woolley is playing the role he created on the stage and is surrounded here by such notables as Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, Billie Burke, Reginald Gardiner and Jimmy Durante.

In fact, what is all this about, anyway? All we are trying to say was that after two stanzas at the Earle, TMWCTD is sticking around for another couple at the Met.

HEDDA HOPPER

Roddy's Ruddy Dream

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 30. Young Roddy McDowell, not finding this treacherous world to his liking, is creating an imaginary country called "Fidelis." For several years he's been drawing maps of his cities and countrysides, charting details of how he'd like his country to be. Now Simon and Schuster have Roddy writing a story to go with it, and will bring it out in book form. I'll bet it'll make more sense than half the stuff that's been written by adults. Remember, "Around the World in Eleven Years" was written by three small children, and "My Great, Wide, Beautiful World," by a barely literate Negro maid. Both books were remarkable for their shrewd observations, because they were written by people too simple to look at life in a complicated manner. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could all look at life with direct honesty and the simplicity of a child?

GAIL PATRICK

Gail Patrick has gone to Palm Springs so her secretary can sun out the flu . . . With Matty Fox, general production manager at Universal, going into the Army, I understand the front office out there is due for a hectic shake-up.

Did you know that Fred Fisher, the song writer who recently died, collaborated on a tune with Lou Gehrig's wife? It's called "I Can't Get To First Base With You."

Dick Arlen was telling me that when he made "The Virginian," with Gary Cooper, the producer almost threw Cooper out of the picture, because he slept so much and seemed so disinterested. But it turned out to be a smash hit . . . Incidentally, if you want to know what time does to "Oscars," Dick tells me the one he got for "Wings" has almost completely shed its paint.

Those spring training scenes for "The Pride of The Yankees," the Lou Gehrig picture, will be filmed right in our own back yard. Sam Goldwyn nixed the idea of sending the company to Florida—claims they ain't got nothin' we ain't got.

Reason Claudette Colbert will take that Sun Valley vacation alone is that her husband has to stay here for his duties with the Navy. Nothing else.

In the original ending of "Courtship of Andy Hardy," Donna Reed was jilted, left unhappy. Preview audiences kicked about it, so they're going to reshoot the ending and have Mickey Rooney let the gal down lightly. She's a darling, that Donna, and should really go places.

Looks as if it's going to be buoy bells instead of wedding bells for Orson Welles, now that he's going to South America fo several months and leave Dolores Del Rio behind. They were supposed to be married when her di vorce become final this month.

Dance Director LeRoy Prinz and some Army officer friend were arguing at the Brown Derby the other night whether Army infantrymen or Hollywood chorus girls have the most stamina. Prinz, who's a veteran of the last war, claims the 30 girls he's using in "Yankee Doodle Dandy" can outlast any 30 soldiers in a contest for which girls would dance and men do a stationary dog-trot—no time out, and those still on their feet to determine the winning side. Well, that's one marathon I'd like to see, wouldn't you?

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

'He Laughs Best—'

Hollywood, Jan. 30 (INS).—Rudy Vallee should worry that the Harvard Lampooners think that he is the "singer of the worst song of 1941." Tucked neatly in his sartorial pocket is a new, long-term Paramount contract launching him as an actor—and he doesn't have to croon a single note if he doesn't want to. There were so many raves from the bosses after Rudy's debut as a character actor in "Palm Beach Story," with Claudette Colbert, that they are rushing him into "Happy Go Lucky," with Mary Martin.

GREER GARSON

Brickbats or bouquets, you really have to take off your hat to Vallee. He's been going good for 20 years—which is indeed a record. I hope the Lampooners can say as much for themselves 20 years from now.

Many of M-G-M's best plums are being handed to Mervin Leroy, who has made some of the company's best money-makers. I hear, through the grapevine route, that he is again to direct Greer Garson and is the lad chosen to megaphone "Random Harvest," with Greer and Ronald Colman.

A line o' two: Groucho Marx, in a satire on Sherlock Holmes, ought to be very funny, especially when written by those two past masters, George Kaufman and Moss Hart. You see that's the news about the eldest of the Marx Clan . . . Miliza Korjus is in Mexico City making a musical screenplay for Miguel Conteras Torres, according to Paul Kohner . . . Pola Negri, who looks wonderful, is expected in Hollywood in ten days.

Davy Crockett, who died with his trapper's cap on at the Alamo, is the latest American hero to be glorified in the movies. Never were Americans so proudly conscious of their own heroes, and the paying public has blazed a trail to the box-office showing pictures like "Sergeant York" and "They Died With Their Boots On." New Warners announce "Davy Crockett," a Technicolor adventure opus, as the first starring picture for Dennis Morgan.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

There comes to hand from the Boston Red Sox a clever little brochure for 1942 in blue pastel with bats sketched in a V theme, and it is very pretty, indeed. Not quite so pretty for Boston fans though, is the story the roster on the inner pages tell. It doesn't seem to contain the wherewithal to beat the Yankees, or the slightest suggestion thereof.

POVICH

The name of thumping Ted Williams, the .406 hitter of last season is there, but who are the Red Sox trying to kid. The Army is grabbing Williams within another month. The suspicion is that Tom Yawkey inserted Williams' name in the 1942 prospectus to make it better reading. Either that, or somebody ought to tell him the facts of life. Williams will be going to bat for the Army next summer.

The Red Sox won't miss Williams any more than they'd miss Yawkey's bankroll. They finished second to the Yanks last season, and Williams took 'em there with his .406 average, his 37 home runs and his 120 runs batted in. The only outfield replacement the Red Sox have obtained is John L. Welaj, who hit .208, batted in five runs and hit no homers for Washington last season. Welaj does not threaten to obliterate, exactly, the Boston fans' memory of Williams.

Boston finished second to the Yankees last season, but the Red Sox would probably prefer that no questions be asked. Because then they'd have to confess that they finished 19½ games behind the Yanks. And that was with Williams. When that young man is subtracted from the Red Sox of 1942, the enormity of Manager Joe Cronin's task of overhauling the Yankees is fairly obvious. Cronin can operate from the comfort, at least, of not being expected to win the pennant.

Cronin Junks Retirement Plans

This next season was to be the one, incidentally, when Cronin was to retire to the ease of the bench managership after 14 years as one of the top shortstops of the league. Cronin is not as sprightly as he used to be. In fact, there were complaints by Boston fans these last two years that Cronin is not sprightly at all. The only reason Joe continued in the lineup was because he didn't feel like benching his bat, which was one of the team's more important weapons.

Cronin had planned to turn the shortstop job over to young John Pesky, the .325-hitting recruit from Louisville, but that won't happen. Pesky is in direct line for Army service, and with the Red Sox attack already taking a brutal rap in the absence of Williams, Cronin has but no course to keep his own big bat in the lineup and let the base hits fall where they may, around shortstop. He's down in Florida now, sticking to what is a painful diet for one of baseball's champion diners. The only edible Cronin likes better than a 2-inch steak is a pair of the same.

A couple of months ago the Red Sox were asking waivers on Jimmy Foxx, who had attained the ripened age of 35, and barely negotiated a .300 average last season. They weren't asking much for Foxx, either. But Jimmy is now a fixture on the club. You see, Al Flair, the chap from Baltimore who was supposed to take Foxx's place at first base for Boston, is now Private Flair, of Battery C, Ninth Battalion, Third Regiment, F. A. R. C., Fort Bragg, N. C. And two other young first basemen on the Red Sox roster, Paul Campbell, of Montreal, and Ulysses Lupien, of Louisville, didn't hit even .290 in the minors last year.

Outfield Is Denuded of Power

So two members of the 1942 Red Sox infield will be the 35-year-old Foxx and the manager-shortstop of the same age. Second Baseman Bobby Doerr, who is stationed between them in the Red Sox infield, appears to be in for a busy summer what with Foxx no great hand at going to his right and Cronin no wizard at going to his left. It's an infield that is not very apt to be popular with the Boston pitchers.

That Boston outfield, as it is constituted without Williams, is not the type to throw a fright into opposing pitchers. Top man is Pete Fox who mustered a .302 average last season. He will be flanked by Dom DiMaggio, a .283 hitter, and Lou Finney, .288. Around to help out will be the aforesaid Welaj and his .208 average. Boston pitchers who can't expect much defensive help from their infield, certainly are not entitled to anticipate any great attacking support from their outfield.

Indicative of the plight of the Boston pitching department is the purchase by the Red Sox of Mace Brown, the old National Leaguer, who couldn't hang on with Pittsburgh and Brooklyn last season. Ken Chase is also an addition. He won six games for the Nats last year, although it might be mentioned that he lost 18. The Red Sox have a pair of nice workers in Charley Wagner and Heber Newsom, but as a whole Boston's pitchers are nothing to evoke any mental handsprings of delight from Cronin. And the Yankees are probably completely unperturbed.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 30.—Max Schmeling, the Nazi paratrooper, had gained permission from Hitler to return to this country as a fighter-propagandist, not long before our declaration of war on Germany.

CONSIDINE

It was agreed in Germany, before this country became a declared enemy of the Reich, that Schmeling actually would be flown across the ocean and would descend at New York by parachute—the new Luftwaffe chute which can be used safely at altitudes as low as 500 feet.

The former champion was so convinced that Joe Louis had slipped badly (he based this on the Conn fight) that he was positive he could repeat his 1936 victory over the Bomber. German authorities were enthusiastic and believed that Schmeling's "popularity" here might help cool off or divide this country's growing anger. They believed too that the parachute stunt might be a broad hint of Germany's air power, and serve as added fuel for isolationist Congressmen who were demanding that we keep our planes and arms and stop sending them to England and Russia.

Schmeling contacted Mike Jacobs but found the promoter cool to the spectacular idea. However, the thing that nullified the plan was that the British refused to guarantee Schmeling safe conduct beyond Bermuda—though they had permitted a member of the Italian royalty to visit his mother in this country, via Bermuda.

Decorated in Greece Campaign

This revelation and the ones to follow were given to us by Pierre Huss, for a number of years the Berlin Correspondent of I. N. S., and recent author of an arresting series on Nazi bigwigs and war conditions in Germany. Huss has known Schmeling for many years; was, in fact, his confidant. He spent several days with the former heavyweight champion after Max returned from his so-called death in Greece. His "death" was a case of tropical fever and a sprained leg—the result of a clumsy chute landing during the attack on Greece.

To guarantee his return to Germany, Schmeling was willing to leave his wife, Anni Ondra, the German movie star, as a hostage. Schmeling's work in the campaign in Greece led to his being decorated and made a corporal. Huss reports that Max is now being used in the German equivalent of morale work.

Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, who played in a number of American tennis tournaments a few years ago, and then was convicted and sent to a German jail for a sex crime, is now an athletic instructor for the Luftwaffe. Over the protests of Heinrich Himmler, boss of the Gestapo, Von Cramm was "sprung" by Herman Goering—his pal. Goering created a job for him and has rebuffed all efforts by Himmler to toss the whoopsy netman back in the clink.

Huss believes that Hitler, although he never played a sport of any kind himself, has made shrewd use of sports. Sixty per cent of the activity of the German youth movement is sports, and has been sports since Hitler began moulding German youths to his pattern eight years ago. The German army only now is beginning to call up 18-year-old kids who, since they were 10 years old, have had Nazi doctrine preached into them. Huss says they are healthy fanatics, and examples of an almost diabolical use of muscle-hardening games.

Nazi Big-Wigs Take Up Golf

There is no longer any such things as "sports for sport's sake" in Germany. Sports events have long since become thinly disguised political rallies. Soccer players goose-step into Olympic Stadium, heil their way past a reviewing stand and then go out and play their game to the tune of the Horst Wessel song. Military precision has come to even the simplest spectator sports.

The Nazis' big winter skating and skiing carnival at Garmisch was called off this winter. Too many were attending simply to get away from R. A. F. bombs.

France, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and other conquered countries frequently send sports teams to Germany, and some of their contests against strong German city soccer teams draw as many as 100,000 spectators. Occasionally the theory backfires. A Berlin vs. Vienna soccer game in Berlin ended in a riot when the Nazi overlord of Vienna, when asked to decide on the winner of the hotly contested tie game, chose Berlin.

Nazi officials have suddenly taken up golf "to prove they are gentlemen," but Huss relates that the experiment has been pretty sad. He watched Rudolph Ley, Nazi labor boss, play not long ago and the man was so wrought up over the insubordination of his clubs—because they wouldn't steer the ball the way he wanted to steer it—that in a frothing rage he broke all his sticks over his knee. And he had been doing that each time he played since becoming sucker enough to take up this most humbling of all sports.

Eagles Rally to Defeat Johnstown, 6 to 4

Last-Period Drive Breaks 4-4 Deadlock

Craig McClelland's Great Work at Net Features Battle; 2068 Watch Game

By Jack Munhall

The unpredictable Washington Eagles came home last night to erase the memory of last Tuesday night's debacle with the New York Rovers by counter-rallying in the final period to defeat Johnstown's undermanned but still formidable Bluebirds, 6-4, at Riverside Stadium.

Before a paid attendance of 2086 the Eagles flashed a welcomed complete reversal of the form that led to their record 11-3 by the Rovers on their last local appearance. The victory, achieved on goals by Keith Allen and Art Thompson late in the third period, brought Washington to the .500 mark for the season with 18 victories and 18 loses. It was their second straight.

Third place Johnstown, with a squad reduced to only 10 players by dismissals and resignations, offered surprisingly strong opposition. Apparently outclassed at one juncture of the third period when the Eagles led, 4-1, the Bluebirds fought back with two match-tying goals and only the magnificent goal-minding of Craig McClelland held them off long enough for the Eagles to put on the clincher.

McClelland, victim of wholesale booing during the second period of last Tuesday's match when the Rovers poured seven goals through him, made the fans eat their bronx cheers last night. Thirty-seven stops the chunky veteran made in one of his finest jobs of the season here.

The teams meet in Johnstown's tiny rink tonight and Washington will be bidding for its first triumph over the Pennsylvanians at home.

Johnstown Ties Score

After a scoreless first period in which McClelland was at his best in the Washington nets, the Eagles grabbed a 1-0 lead on Freddy Weaver's spectacular goal, as he was smashed to the ice by Jack Dyte, big Johnstown defenseman. The little blond crowd-pleaser had stolen the puck from an enemy, the second time in about a minute that he had committed such a larceny.

That score was at 2:38. Some 11 minutes later, 13:57 to be exact, Johnstown tied the count when the

Light-Heavy Champion Is No Match

Victory Unanimous In Slow 10-Round Scrap in New York; No Knockdowns

By Bob Considine

New York, Jan. 30.—Bob Pastor won the highly debatable honor of another return match with Joe Louis tonight by out-spearing and out-jigging light-heavyweight champion Gus Lesnevich in a 10-round match at Madison Square Garden that aroused considerable disinterest.

Pastor's victory was unanimous. He was bigger, faster, boxed better and had a little more power on his punches—though it would have taken a sensitive recording machine to measure either man's punch. There were no knockdowns and the blood-letting was confined to small leaks around the fighters' scar-tissued eyes.

Lesnevich No Match

Lesnevich's title was not at stake, since the 175-pound champion weighed 181 and Pastor 183¼. But the match hardly added to the negotiability of his crown, for the barely heavier Pastor was cleanly the better fighter. Nor can Lesnevich retire to his Jersey flat after tonight, for the bout drew only 9592 persons and $20,728, and Lesnevich's share had been pretty well borrowed up before he began trying to tag runaway Robert.

Pastor's third fight with the Brown Bomber probably will be staged in late March when Private J. L. Barrow comes into town from Camp Upton to fight for the Army relief fund. They fought first in January, 1937, and Pastor stunned the boxing world, chiefly Louis, by going the route, 10 rounds, mostly backwards. Their second fight in Detroit, in September, 1939, saw Pastor carry the battle into the eleventh round before being knocked out. He is the only man to last longer against Louis the second time than he did the first. A third Louis victory would give Joe permanent possession of Pastor.

Blood Leaks From Eye

Therewasn't much to tonight's fight, one boxer outboxed the other. The closest approach to a knockdown was scored by Lesnevich when he caught Pastor with a short right to the whiskers in the sixth. Bob's knees became hairy parentheses. But Gus either couldn't or just forgot to follow up, and Pastor slapped back well enough to come out even in the round.

Lesnevich's eye began bleeding in the second round, and, like Penn Station, stayed open thereafter. Pastor's eye leaked through the ninth

Miss Tainter Wins Miami Golf Tourney

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30.—Youthful Georgia Tainter, Fargo (N. Dak.) High School pupil, who started no better than third choice, won the Miami Biltmore Golf tournament today with a surprising 6 and 5 victory over Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, the favorite.

At one point in the 36-hole finals, Miss Tainter held a 7-up lead. Miss Kirby made one final desperate effort and won the eleventh and twelfth holes of the afternoon round, but on the thirteenth her tee shot went bad and she lost her chance.

Both contenders carded 40's for the front nine in the afternoon. The morning 18 had left the North Dakotan 6 up.

DiMaggio, Sr., Among Italians Ordered to Move

By International News Service

San Francisco, Jan. 30.—Joe DiMaggio, sr., father of America's brightest baseball luminary, was among an estimated 1400 Italian aliens hit today by the removal order affecting Axis nationals living along San Francisco's waterfront.

The elder DiMaggio's swank fish "Grotto" restaurant—built largely from funds supplied by the Yankees' current king of swat, and his brother, Vince DiMaggio—lies within the area prescribed by Attorney General Francis Biddle.

Both Papa and Mama DiMaggio and the eldest of their nine children were born in Italy. Their home, however, lies two blocks beyond the restricted boundaries and will be unaffected.

Some officials estimated the restriction would cut off the livelihood of 1400 of the 2000 men employed in San Francisco's $500,000-a-year fishing industry.

Guldahl Shares Lead In $5000 Golf Meet

Posts a 68 to Tie With Young Des Moines Pro on First Day of Crosby Tournament

By the Associated Press

Rancho Santa Fe, Calif., Jan. 30.—Big Ralph Guldahl found his old time prowess on the golf links today for the first time in many months and stroked himself into a tie for first place in the first day's firing of the $5000 tournament staged by singer Bing Crosby.

The two-time winner of the National Open championship in 1937 and 1938 fired a 32-36—68 in his opening bid for the Crosby title and wound up tied with a 31-year-old professional from Des Moines, darkhorse Joe Brown, who posed a 33-35.

Guldahl and Brown dominated the play as the first half of the field of nearly 300 pros and amateurs teed off in this sixth annual event. The second half tees off tomorrow, and encompasses virtually all the big-name golfers—including defending Champion Sam Snead and Ben Hogan, Byron Nelson and their brethren touring shotmakers.

Guldahl Four Under Par

Guldahl's 32 on the first nine was four under par figures for the Rancho Santa Fe Golf Club course—his adopted home grounds—and he matched par on the trip in.

He and his amateur partner, Cliff Garner, a barber from nearby La Jolla, turned in the low best-ball net score in the pro-amateur competition, a 62.

The two pace setters finished one stroke ahead of Ray Mangrum, of Pittsburgh, and Emery Zimmerman, slender Portland, Oreg., pro. While two strokes behind Guldahl and Brown were George Schneiter, Ogden, Utah, with 37, 33—70, and Bill Nary, the home pro, with 35, 35—70.

Guldahl's comeback stamped him as a threat to the reign of Sam Snead over the tournament.

Snead won for the third time last year with a 36-hole score of 67, 69—

Harvard-Yale Rowing Classic Transferred

By the Associated Press

New London, Conn., Jan. 30.—A decision by Yale and Harvard athletic officials to transfer the annual rowing classic between the two institutions from the Thames River, New London, to the Housatonic River at Derby, perhaps for the duration of the war, was announced today by F. Valentine Chappell honorary chairman of the regatta committee.

Present plans call for a distance cut from 4 to 2 miles and set the date tentatively for either May 16 or 23.

Similar action was taken in 1918 during the World War.

Coach Harlow Advocates Use Of Freshmen

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Jan. 30.—Freshmen will be playing on many varsity football squads next season, but Dick Harlow, of Harvard, insists the average fan won't know who they are unless he looks at his program.

"The first-year men won't lower the standard of the game a bit," said the veteran coach of the first major Eastern school to approve the use of freshmen in varsity games.

Harlow predicted the game would be "more interesting than ever" next fall.

"There's some difference, of course, between the standards of freshmen play and varsity competition," the Harvard coach explained, "but by mixing in a few of the better frosh with more seasoned players a coach should be able to develop a team that's just as good to watch as his regular varsity.

"Forward passing, for instance, probably won't be affected at all by the use of freshmen, because in spite of what anybody says, good forward passers are made by God and not by coaches. You're just as likely to find a good freshman passer as you are to develop one on your varsity squad."

More Experimenting

Harlow said he believed two factors would help make football more interesting next season.

"All coaches will be experimenting more than ever before," he asserted. "They'll be forced to try many changes to make up for the loss of key players to the armed services. And that increase in experimentation is certain to make football more interesting and a better game in every respect."

The second reason fans will like football better, Harlow said, is that "the rules committee very wisely decided against any major changes for 1942."

Dolph Camilli Set to Argue For Pay Boost

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 30.—Brooklyn's No. 1 baseball player, husky Dolph Camilli, is going to pack his 1942 contract difficulties, if any, right into the lion's den. He plans to report to the Dodgers' front office and Head Man Larry MacPhail in person February 16 for a conference.

Camilli, riding herd on his 1700-acre ranch in northern California, near Laytonville, was slightly on the noncommittal side during a telephone conversation today. From his remarks, however, it was plain he thought he rated a salary boost in view of last year's outstanding season that saw him named the most valuable player in the National League.

For reasons unknown to Camilli, the club did not mail him a new contract. Instead, he received a letter from MacPhail inviting him to Brooklyn to discuss terms. Camilli mulled over the idea a few days before writing he would accept the invitation.

Deal Would Suit Him

Brooklyn put the big first baseman on the market this winter and undoubtedly it was a jolt to his pride. He has given the broad acres of his sizable ranch many a cuffing since he read of the proposed deal.

Honest toil, with workouts with his 11 horses and some fishing and hunting trips sandwiched in, have combined to put Camilli in peak condition. He is down to playing weight and raring to go.

If Brooklyn wants to peddle Camilli to some other club it will be all right with him. He thinks the Dodgers organization will be the loser. "I've got a lot of baseball left in me and I think I will have as good a season this year as last," he said.

Aside from the belief he earned a salary increase, Camilli thinks Brooklyn has a good chance to repeat for the pennant. Acquistion of veteran Shortstop Arky Vaughn will give the Dodgers new attacking power, he feels.

Coolness between Camilli and his boss is no myth. When McPhail's name was mentioned the air turned real chilly. Asked how relations between the two were, Dolph replied he thought things were all right, he hoped.

The Army draft board probably will look over his head for some time to come. He has five children.

Stranahan Wins Another Golf Title

St. Augustine, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Frank Stranahan, of Toledo, Ohio, won his second consecutive Florida winter golf tournament today, defeating Louis Broward, of Jacksonville, Fla., 3 and 1, in the finals of the Ponce de Leon Cup event.

Last week Stranahan captured the trophy in the Miami Biltmore Amateur. He also holds the amateur State titles of Ohio and Arizona, and won the 1941 trans-Mississippi amateur tourney.

Broward played Stranahan on even terms during the first 18 holes of today's finals, both touring the long St. Augustine course in 74, two over par.

Madame Bey Dies; 'Mother' to Boxers

Heart Ailment Fatal To Famed Proprietor Of Training Camp

By the Associated Press

Morristown, N. J., Jan. 30.—Mme. Hranoush, Bey, who for more than two decades mothered topflight boxers at her training camp in Chatham Township, died today in All Souls' Hospital of a heart ailment.

She had been ill about six months.

Mme. Bey was 59 or 60 years old, a son said. She came from Constantinople in 1898, the bride of Sidky Bey, Turkish diplomat to Washington. She danced at the White House and sang in Carnegie Hall.

Then came the World War and her husband resigned rather than accept a transfer to Berlin.

Fall at Farming

The Beys left the gay Washington social whirl to try farming. That failed, so they accepted an offer to take over the health farm. Dame Bey knew nothing about boxers or cooking, but she studied both, and the training-camp business flourished.

Foreign fighters felt at home in her place because she spoke six languages.

Among her alumni were Max Schmeling, Freddie Steele, Tommy Farr, Paul Berlenbach, Primo Carnera, Lou Ambers and Gene Tunney, whom she called her "polished emerald."

"It's a wonderful life, knowing these strong boys, observing their

12,680 See Third Covey Win as Hialeah Donates to Benefit

Turf Greats Parade; $40,000 May Go To War Relief; Winner Pays $18.20

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 30.—One of the biggest crowds of the meeting—the count was 12,680 as compared to 10,083 a year ago—turned out here this afternoon for "War Benefit Day" as racing once again did its bit. The featured sixth race, a $2000, one mile test for exceptionally high grade platers valued at $7500, was appropriately called the President's Birthday Handicap. This contest followed a "parade of stars" which saw a galaxy of equine luminaries on exhibition.

Hal Price Headley's Third Covey, after a string of reverses, surprised most of the big crowd by scoring a three lengths victory in the headline event. An $18.20 for $2 chance in the field of eight, the Supremus 5-year-old defeated J. H. Miles' Peep Show to bring his Kentucky owner $1400 and a $1000 defense bond. Total Eclipse finished fourth. He and Bucking were victims of a straggling start. Liberty Franc, the favorite, faded back after being well placed early.

Donated All Proceeds

The Miami Jockey Club was donating all proceeds of the day. Sharing equally in these funds were the American Red Cross, Army Relief Society, Navy Relief Society and National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. It was estimated that upward of $40,000 might be realized for the worthy causes. After the running of the feature, track officials, dignitaries representing the four organizatoins benefitting by the occasion, Owner H. P. Headley and others figured in presentation ceremonies in the winners' circle. A band played the National Anthem while the crowd stood at attention.

The "parade of stars" proved a highly entertaining attraction. Nine famous horses walked to the head of the stretch, their riders sporting stable silks. Then, in their post position order, the thoroughbreds were allowed to canter from the eighth pole to the finish line, while the achievements of each was described over the public address system. All received generous applause. They were, in the order paraded and cantered: W. L. Brann's Pictor, Samuel Riddle's War Relic, Mrs. C. S. Payson's Amphitheatre, Mrs. Payne Whitney's Devil Diver, Louis Tufano's Market Wise, the Royce Martin's Our Boots, E. R. Bradley's Bless Me, A. T. Jergins' Peruvian star, Meissen, and Mrs. Albert Sabath's Alsab.

Foot Healed

Market Wise was allowed to join in the activities after Trainer George Carroll became satisfied, early this afternoon, that the colt's slightly injured near forefoot had sufficiently responded to treatment since removal of a pus pocket on Thursday morning.

Third Covey raced Cassis into defeat, then drew out with ease in the day's main event. Peep Show, well rated, spurted around the last turn and easily staved off Bucking.

moods and trying, unobtrusively, to mother them," she once said.

Her son, Rustem Bey, is police chief of Chatham Township. Her husband died a few years ago.

Mme. Bey spent two weeks in the hospital last fall for treatment of the heart condition, but was released in two weeks. She suffered a relapse on Tuesday.

Mme. Bey's training camp comprises a large frame house, crammed with overstuffed furniture and Turkish ornaments, and a modern gymnasium.

On the walls hang pictures of Washington society of other days. One shows a White House reception, with Mme. Bey standing beside President McKinley.

She was happy in her role of parent and disciplinarian to rough and ready men. Often her mezzo-soprano rolled through the camp as she sang arias of operas she used to sing for concert audiences.

Never Bet on Fights

Mme. Bey never bet on a fight or gave her boys any tips on the future. She confided that her one regret was that she never was able to make her trainees keep up their homework after she had buffed the rough edges during their stays at her camp.

Her father was Armenian and her mother, French.

The funeral will be Monday at the camp with the Rev. W. O. Kinsolving, pastor of Calvary Episcopal Church, Summit, officiating. Burial will be in Fairmount Cemetery, Newark.

Selections at Hialeah.

Dear Al:

W. L. Brann, owner of Challedon, announced that Lady Legend has just given birth to a full brother of Pictor at the Glade Valley Farm in Maryland. Pictor also has another full brother now a yearling. Kenty Miss, 6-year-old mare which ran in the second race last Thursday, was sired by Kenty when the latter was only a 2-year-old. There's a juvenile here named Bar C that might be worth remembering although he showed little in his debut. When this one starts winning tell your friends where you first learned about him. One of the appropriately named 2-year-olds here is Generosity, a daughter of Castel Fusano. Robert A. Fairbairn, the breeder, gave the filly to Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, who promptly attached the name. Jockey George Woolf arrived from California. Regarded as the Nation's top "money rider," Woolf will have the mounts on Challedon, Pictor and other horses owned by W. L. Brann. George rides few horses these days but he gets the big mounts. Bill Vreeland, veteran turf writer from the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, is ill in the Jackson Memorial Hospital here. His many friends are rooting for a speedy recovery. Ken Force continues to do an excellent job of outriding. He is the champion when it comes to catching loose horses. When the filly, The Swallow, was beaten here the other day somebody started singing, "Follow The Swallow back to the poorhouse." I received a note from Miss Judy Johnson and she tells me the Redland Hunt will hold its annual races on Saturday, March 7. Hope they have better weather than they did last year. The Turpenning Cup, the Gap Hunters and the Redland Bowl events will be on the point-to-point program. Friend T. T. Mott is master of foxhounds at Redland. Tom Thorp, the racing and football official, visited the press box yesterday. He looks hail and hearty and is vacationing until Tropical Park reopens.

BILL.

First race—AMPLE REWARD looks like the right one in the day's opener. Seems capable of carrying top weight to victory. BUSHEL BASKET and MY REWARD to take care of the place and show.

Second race—MEMORY BOOK has been racing straight in his last two outings. He will have those ancient legs groomed for this and I'm going to string along. HANDIBOY and LEONARDTOWN to take care of the place and show.

Third race—BROWN BOMB could be the right one in this rather open affair. Gets in light and favors the route. PORTSMOUTH and CARTIGAGA are good now and should be in the money circle.

Fourth race—HORN is tossed in this with a feather assignment and should take it all. Likes the mile. ETERNAL PEACE is better than shown recently. RISE ABOVE IT surprised last out and is dangerous.

Fifth race—SIGNATOR gets the best of the weights for this and is likely to take command and not look back. SHERIFF CULKIN has his speed, but like DEKALB, he may be packing too much poundage.

Sixth race—TROIS PISTOLES worked well on the turf the other afternoon and I'm going to string along with this foreign-bred in the day's feature. BATTLE COLORS is fit and ready. SIR MARLBORO won last out on the grass course.

Seventh race—HISTRIONIC gets top weight, but I believe he can turn back this kind at a fair price. TOPEE likes the route and is a threat. GALLANT BOY to take care of the others.

Eighth race—SPEED TO SPARE breaks off the rail for this and I see no reason for mistakes. STRONG ARM is formidable and deserves respect. HIGH ONE for the show end.

Best bet—SIGNATOR.

Notes From Miami:

Pieces of Haight:

Dear Boss, Miami, Fla.

I'll have to take Jake's advice again. He says, "Aw, write about beautiful Miami and this and that." So here goes:

Miami is beginning to realize that this is an off season . . . those who once piled up enough profits to carry them through the summer know by now that this just isn't a Florida year . . . January jitters have turned into February fidgets and there is little to look forward to a mournful March . . . Miamians shudder to think of next summer . . . Last year there was plenty of building activity here . . . just why anybody wanted to build a hotel after the 1940 season we'll never know . . . but 30 went up during July, August and September . . . it's a cinch, what with priorities and the like, there won't be much building hereabouts . . . they tell me that several owners are ready now to raffle off their hotels at three chances for a quarter . . . looking around for some other source of revenue, Miami is beginning to believe that it has been passed up as far as defense work is concerned . . . I understand the city will get a full-of-pep city manager, plus a lobby department in Washington . . . if the Government wants to decentralize something there is plenty of office space in the local hotels, plus other large buildings not in use.

HAIGHT

I ran into the height of something or another last night . . . I was out to the jai alai (hi-li) games, where they bet on men instead of horses . . . there was a fellow who carried an auto tag under his arm . . . inquiring as to the reason, I found that he bets on the tag numbers . . . I asked if it wouldn't be simpler to write down the numbers and leave the tags on the car . . . I was informed that he won several hundred dollars while carrying the plates and now he always brings them along for good luck . . . there are several novelty shops here featuring those fake newspaper headlines . . . you write out what you want printed across the top of the dummy newspaper and they set it up . . . for instance, "Joe Blow From Idaho Hits $6842 Daily Double" . . . Joe sends it home and becomes a big shot . . . well I'm going to get one for a certain radio man before I leave . . . I'm going to have them print "Train Stops With Jerk—Art Brown Gets Off" . . . as I write this Miami has hit the jack pot as far as the weather is concerned . . . it is what is referred to here as a "beach day" . . . the race track attendance usually suffers as a result.

Drug stores, lunchrooms, etc., don't feature slot machines and dice games any more . . . and the bingo games, once the largest in the country, are conspicuous by their absence . . . Miami has pinball machines but "For Amusement Only" signs are displayed . . . if the motorist swishes past you at 50 miles an hour . . . if he starts on the first flicker of the yellow light . . . if he swings out over the white line and then cuts in front of you . . . if he sneaks in behind you when you are trying to back into parking place . . . you don't have to look . . . there are Florida tags on the car . . . the Five O'Clock Club gives drinks on the house at 5 o'clock . . . if you set your alarm you can get a free shot every 12 hours . . . one of the pressbox boys at Hialeah went fishing yesterday . . . he reported that everybody on the boat except him had a good day. . . . "The only thing I caught," he said, "was an electric eel with the battery run down." There is little or no sign of the war here. . . . I couldn't find an Army, Navy or Marine uniform at the track today.

With one exception all the swans in the infield lake at Hialeah are either entirely white or entirely black . . . the odd one has a white body and a black neck and head . . . I believe I'll just let it go at that . . . Hialeah has three watering-wagons but I haven't seen anybody on them except the drivers . . . there isn't a street car left in Miami but the bus service is good . . . Al Jolson has bought a home here and has moved from California . . . women without artificial flowers in their hair are considered only half dressed hereabouts . . . slacks seem to be going out of style . . . which is O. K. with me.

Always your ace,

Pounds Haight.

P. S.—Send more money. Teaching some fellows how to play gin rummy.

Fourth-Place Lions Seeking Upper Brackets

Now close on the heels of the third-place New Haven club in the Eastern Division, the Washington Lions are showing improvement in their fight to qualify for the championship playoffs of the American Hockey League late in March.

To gain the playoffs Ching Johnson's Lions will more than likely have to beat out New Haven, since third place or better is required to qualify and since the Eagles appear to be the only team the locals can overhaul.

Tonight and Sunday night will mark important games for the bolstered Lions who are giving out with great roars since acquiring Erwin McGibbon and Tony Graboski on loan from Les Canadiens. Hershey, to be met tonight in that Pennsylvania town's beautiful arena, is the Western Division leader, while Springfield, which will invade the Lions here Sunday night, is the Eastern Division pace-setter.

The Lions, undefeated in their last three matches, including a 2-0 shutout of Buffalo, may surprise tonight with their first victory of the season over Hershey's Bears. The Boston Bruins' loss of their famed "Kraut Line" to the Canadian Armed Forces was also Hershey's loss, for the Bears have on loan many promising Boston farm hands who may be recalled to make up for the Bruins' unscheduled losses.

Evidence that Hershey, even at full strength, isn't what it was early in the game was given the other night when the lowly Pittsburgh Hornets trounced them, 7 to 1. In their last previous start, the Hornets had bowed to the Lions, 3-2.

Sabin Turns Back Barnes on Courts

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 30 (U.P.).—Wayne Sabin, latest entrant in the ranks of professional tennis, blasted Bruce Barnes, Houston, Tex., in straight sets today, 8—6, 7—5, 6—3, in a quarter-final match of Orlando's $1000 pro tournament.

In the only other singles match played today, Keith Gledhill, of Glendale, Calif., defeated Frank Ericha, Miami Beach, 2—6, 6—1, 7—5, 6—3.

Undefeated Virginia Boxers Face Maryland Here Tonight

Cage Contest Also Slated; Frosh Play

Terp Five Engages Cavaliers in First Action; York's Ring Team Is Unbeaten

The University of Virginia, the big-name school in college boxing in these parts and an institution which has helped greatly in making the game what it is today, will bring one of its traditionally good ring teams to College Park tonight to meet Maryland's leather-pushers in one of the winter sports features of the season.

The 9:15 ring match will be the second meeting of the evening before an expected capacity house of 4000 at College Park between the Old Liners and Cavaliers, as an 8 o'clock basketball engagement precedes the main show.

Maryland is offering the athletic-minded a full program today for if the night twin bill is not enough, the frosh have an afternoon doubleheader at Ritchie Coliseum, meeting Baltimore Poly in basketball at 3:30 and Virginia's freshman boxing team immediately following.

Virginia's varsity boxers, under the tutelage of Coach Al York, assistant for many years and now successor to the late Johnny LaRowe, are undefeated, having polished off Virginia Poly and North Carolina. Maryland will be out to climb above the .500 mark, showing a victory over Western Maryland last Saturday, a defeat by Coast Guard Academy and tie with South Carolina in three matches.

Terps Always Tough

Maryland boxers have proven a stumbling block for the Charlottesville lads throughout the seven-year series. Virginia has won three times, Maryland once and the Terps have gained ties in three other meetings. Virginia won last year, 5½ to 2½.

One of the standout attractions of the evening is promised as early as the 135-pound class when the promising sophomore battlers, Tom Jones, of the Terps, and Willie Barnett, of the visitors, renew a rivalry begun last year when Barnett won a close decision in a lively frosh encounter. The Virginia lad is unbeaten through scholastic boxing with Lane High in Charlottesville, his frosh year and two varsity bouts while Jones holds three knockout victories this year.

In the 175-pound class two high school buddies at Baltimore Poly, Norman Rathbun, of the Cavaliers, and Maryland's Southern Conference champion, Herb Gunther, will meet as opponents.

Norman will be the second member of the boxing Rathbun family of the evening on the card for in the preceding 165-pound class his brother, Ken, team captain and co-star of the squad with Barnett, will test Jack Gilmore, Maryland's clever ringman who decisioned the favored Carlos Ortenzi, of the Terrors, last week despite being out of condition.

Parlow Is Back

Milt Parlow, the 6-foot-3, 210-pound heavyweight of Coach York's squad will be back to put in a ring appearance after a two-week layoff. Terp Mentor Bobby Goldstein will match Len Rodman against the Virginia bruiser.

John Cicala at 120, Judson Lincoln at 127, Hotsy Alperstein, the seasoned 145-pounder, and Pat Quinn at 155 will round out the Terp squad while two or three Virginia places are undecided although they may fight Tommy Thomason at 120, Jim McIver at 127, Bill Victor at 145 and Frank Null at 155.

Maryland's basketball team holds a 35-34 triumph over the Cavaliers in an early-January Charlottesville meeting and with his sophomores improving plus the pleasing round to form of Bob Fetters and Mearle DuVall, Coach Burt Shipley's men will enjoy a favorite role. Virginia won its first four games but has been taking a cuffing around from its major State rivals since. Its last appearance was a one-sided triumph over Emory and Henry.

Ernie Travis will take his 11-game point total of 173 against the Cavaliers and on his home court will be in a likely spot to maintain his 16-point-a-game average.

Fight judges will be Shirley Povich, sports columnist of The Post, and Ed Brockman, of Baltimore, with Charley Short the referee. Station WCHV, in Charlottesville, will broadcast a blow-by-blow description of the bouts to its Virginia audience. M. W. W.

Landon Prep Bows, 31 to 8, To St. James

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 30.—St. James School handed the basketball team of Landon Prep of Washington its most decisive beating of the season here today, a 31-to-8 affair in which the invaders showed no attack whatever.

Center Wallace, before being removed, amassed 17 of the winners' points as Landon lost its third game in seven starts. Only three other players scored for St. James, but Wallace's efforts were enough.

Joe Devereux managed for two field goals to lead Landon's ineffective assault.

Interhigh Quintets In Twin Bill Tonight

Eastern Faces Roosevelt and Coolidge Meets Tech on Latter's Court at 7:30

With a heartfelt sigh of relief the public high schools of Washington resume after-dark basketball operations tonight, a doubleheader at Tech bringing together the hosts and Coolidge at 7:30, and Eastern and Roosevelt an hour later.

The interhigh exchequer already has suffered considerably by the shift several weeks ago to daylight play, in deference to the air-raid scare. Afternoon bills, it developed, drew scarcely enough fans to pay expenses. Now officials envision several capacity houses, their only chance of making ends meet.

In tonight's program they have a real drawing card. The headliner sends a surprisingly potent Roosevelt five, leader in the series, against a White Tide that should be leading, but actually is bogged down in a triple tie for fourth place.

And in the opener it will be Tech's four times beaten forces against Coolidge, the outsider which started off like a million but is gradually finding its anticipated level.

Eastern's main hope develops around the fact that the Riders have already clinched a playoff place. Thus their resistance, the Tide prays, will be something less than if the chips were down. And the Tide desperately needs a victory tonight.

It's the same situation with Coolidge, which is one of Eastern's fourth-place mates. In contrast to Roosevelt, which has won all its league games, Tech goes into tonight's action against the Colts with four straight losses behind it. Its play should be just as loose as the Riders' with nothing depending on the outcome.

The feature of the remaining card will go on at Alexandria, where Episcopal plays host to Virginia Episcopal in a rivalry of long standing.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

Coolidge at Tech, 7:30.
Eastern vs. Roosevelt, at Tech, 8:30.
Virginia Episcopal at Episcopal, 3:30.
Friends at St. Andrew's (Middleton, Del.)
J. Marshall at Fairfax, 3:30.

Savold, Beech On Scene for Monday Bout

Lee Savold, one of the more prominent heavyweights who hasn't fought Champion Joe Louis yet, arrived yesterday to prepare for his ten-round engagement with Neville Beech Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Having added more heft (he weighs 195 now), Savold worked out for an hour yesterday. Among the interested spectators were Lieut. John Agnew, the Police Department's member of the District Boxing Commission, and Ken Overlin, former middleweight champion of the world.

Savold is aiming for the coveted shot at Louis and his manager, Bill Daley, has high hopes of landing a bout with the champion. He's not taking Beech too lightly, however.

Little known here, Beech is rated highly in the South. In this month's Ring magazine, the Mississippi heavyweight is rated second to "Soldier Boy" Gomez in the Southern rankings.

Beech also drilled yesterday with his sparmate, Freddy Griggs, who is fighting Jabbo Kenner, Washington colored heavyweight. Griggs, a powerful built Texan, hasn't shown the speed and finesse of Beech, although he appears more rugged.

Drills will be held again today at the arena. Savold will enter the ring at 1 o'clock and Beech will follow at 2.

A victory for Beech Monday would catapult the 22-year-old Southerner into a contending position in the heavyweight division. And Beech is housing hopes of turning the trick. Yesterday he refused to enter the arena until Savold had finished his training, stating, "the only way I want to see Savold, is on the floor with me standing over him Monday night."

Tickets are on sale at Turner's Arena, Fourteenth and W Streets Northwest.

Fort Belvoir Five On Brewer Card

Fort Belvoir, with a couple of hundred soldiers expected to be on hand to cheer, will meet Pepco, in a preliminary game tomorrow night at the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest, to the feature American Professional Basketball League contest between the Washington Brewers and the Trenton Tigers.

The prelim will start at 7:30, with the main battle going on at 9 p. m.

Washington will be playing its first league home game at the Heurich court in two years, having shifted from Turner's Arena.

Moorestown Trips Friends By 30-28 Count

Special Dispatch to The Post

Moorestown, N. J., Jan. 30.—Despite a 21-point scoring spree by "Cotton" Smith, Sidwell-Friends School basketers lost a 30-28 decision to Moorestown Friends here tody, the local boys winning with a late rally.

Sidwell-Friends ran up a 15-6 lead at the half and appeared well on the way to victory when Moorestown started its uprising. Armstrong and Barry paced a drive that brought the hosts up ahead just in time.

The game was the third straight close one between the clubs, Moorestown winning last year's by one point and Sidwell winning two years ago by the same margin.

Babe Ruth Swings Baseball Bat Again—For Movie Role

Old Bambino to Appear in Film Based On Gehrig's Life; in Good Condition

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 30.—Babe Ruth, who hasn't been on the back end of a baseball bat in nearly four years, took a few practice swings in his Riverside Drive apartment today and pronounced himself ready for his newest role as a movie actor.

"I never felt better in my life," said the Babe, who will leave with his wife next week for Hollywood to appear in a picture based on the life of Lou Gehrig.

"I weigh 223, less than I've weighed in 15 years. If they keep taking all these young kids in the Army, I guess I'll have to go back into baseball. That's if I can get someone to run for me."

The former slugger who came out of an orphan's home and batted his way to the position of baseball's highest-paid star with the New York Yankees, started packing for his departure next Thursday, two days before his forty-eighth birthday anniversary.

Ruth said he had recovered completely from his recent breakdown, and to prove it he wrestled the trunks around like the Bambino of old.

Since his illness, he said, he has curtailed his golfing and bowling, but not his smoking.

"I smoke cigars and my pipe all day and night. No cigarettes, though. And no spirits."

Eager to begin work on the picture, in which Gary Cooper will take the part of Gehrig, Ruth said he had no thought of stage fright.

"I'm an old actor from 'way back," he said. "I've made five shorts, and I was in two feature-length baseball pictures during the silent films, one with Anna Q. Nilsson. I had the leading part."

But the Babe will balk at make-up—except a little powder.

"No eye brow pencil or any of that other stuff," he declared.

Marse Joe Isn't Singing The Blues—He Likes His Yanks

Hassett Slated for First Base; Selkirk Ready for Henrich's Post

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 30.—Although the Army already has taken First Baseman Johnny Sturm and soon may claim Rightfielder Tommy Henrich, the fate of the New York Yankees is causing Manager Joe McCarthy no worry.

"These are changing times and you can't tell what may happen before the season opens. But we'll have about the same team that beat Brooklyn in the World Series last fall, and that wasn't a bad ball club," McCarthy said today.

Marse Joe, who will be 55 years old in April, surveyed the future with serenity while puffing at a fat cigar in the midtown offices of the Yankees. He looked hale, with scarcely a gray hair even though a manager doesn't just coast to five world championships in six years.

Hassett On First

McCarthy said his first baseman would be John Aloysius (Buddy) Hassett, who began his baseball career in the Yankee farm system and returned to the champions last month after six years with the Dodgers and Boston Braves.

Hassett, a Bronx boy with a penchant for lending his Irish tenor to any quartet on the slightest provocation, was brought back to the Yanks in the deal that sent Outfielder Tommy Holmes, of Newark, to the Braves and was intended to be shuttled along to the highest bidder.

But the enlistment of Sturm in the Army changed that idea and McCarthy professed himself satisfied to go along with Hassett, who is a good but short hitter although not an outstanding fielder.

"We haven't anyone we can count on right away in our system," he admitted, "and there isn't much chance of us making a trade. We want to keep all the men that we have now.

"If we lose Henrich we've got George Selkirk. He's still a good sound ball player and he can still run and hit."

McCarthy said he probably would take 17 pitchers, half a dozen outfielders, the same number of infielders and four catchers to camp. The list is still being considered by him and President Ed Barrow, but the manager said there was a possibility that George (Tuck) Stainback, who has been with five other major league clubs and now is the property of Kansas City, might train with the Yanks.

A couple of vacancies have been left on the pitching staff by Steve Peek and Charley Stanceu, who have entered the service. These are likely to be filled from among Allen Gettel, John Lindell, George Washburn and Rinaldo Ardizoia, all of whom were in camp with the Yankees last year.

Segura Captures Florida Net Match

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 30 (AP).—Francisco Segura, South American champion, stroked to an easy 6—0, 6—0 victory over Steve Colson, Miami, today to enter the quarter-finals of the Florida West Coast Tennis Tournament.

Top-seeded Segura tomorrow will play John Jennis, St. Petersburg, Fla., junior public courts champion, who defeated Guy Garber, of Miami, in the third rund, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3.

In the quarter-finals of the women's singles, Pauline Betz, Los Angeles, defeated Peggy Welch, Philadelphia, 6—0, 6—3; Dorothy Bundy, Santa Monica, Calif., eliminated Nellie Sheer, Miami, 6—2, 6—1, and Doris Hart, Miami, defeated Mary Jane Metcalf, Denver, 6—1, 6—4.

The other quarter-finalist is Marta Andrade, Miami, who won from Nancy Corbett, Chicago, 6—0, 6—0 yesterday.

Mary Hurd Is High In Bowling Match

Mary Hurd, of Chi Sigma No. 2, posted high game of 132 last night in the Intersorority Bowling League at the Hi-Skor alleys. Ruth DeChastain, of Beta Chi No. 1, posted high set of 318.

Chi Sigma carded team high with 509 and Alpha Zeta Beta totaled high set of 1416.

Little Generals Defeat G. W. High, 27 to 23

Alexandria, Jan. 30.—A six-point barrage in an overtime period gave Washington-Lee High, of Arlington, a 27-23 basketball victory over George Washington High five here tonight, as the bitter Class A Conference foes met for the first time this year.

A large and boisterous crowd saw the scrap, decided by successive baskets on the part of Bob Huff, Jimmy McNally and John Grinnell. The hosts' only retaliation after regulation time had ended with the teams in a 21-21 deadlock, was a two-pointer by Rosy O'Brien.

As a result of the game, G.-W. and W.-L. are deadlocked in the top scholastic league of Virginia, each with two losses and two victories.

Until the dazzling windup, every indication pointed to just such a finish. The lead switched hands numerous times, was tied at others. The Presidents of G.-W. held a slim 12-10 margin at intermission.

Frederick Five Routed, 32-13, By Anacostia

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., Jan. 30.—Led by Nelson and Penn and displaying air-tight defense, the Anacostia High basketers had little trouble taking the Frederick High School Cadets here this afternoon, 32 to 13.

So tight was the Anacostia defense that the Cadet scoring from the floor was limited to three field goals by Kerchner. The losers could convert only 7 of their 17 tries from the foul line.

Gonzaga Five Loses, 30-19, To Woodberry

Special Dispatch to The Post

Woodberry Forest, Va., Jan. 30.—The Woodberry Forest five downed Gonzaga of Washington on a last-half splurge here today, 30-19.

Britt, Fuller and Glascock combined to send the host team into an early seven-point lead, but Capt. Murphy and Fanning rallied their team with a total of 12 points between them to give the Washingtonians a two-point margin at half time as Woodberry was limited to one basket in the second period.

With Jack Glascock pacing the attack, the home team came back with a vengeance in the third quarter to regain the lead on a 15-point scoring spree while the visitors were connecting for but three markers on a goal by Nolan and free throw by Lauck.

The tempo slowed down in the final stanza as the winners increased their lead by one point over the hard-fighting visitors.

Colored Champs To Parade Giants In Game Tonight

Cage champions of the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association, representing North Carolina State College, who engage the Brooklyn College five tonight at Turner's Arena, boast a half dozen six-footers on their squad.

Ennis, captain for three years, together with Collins, will start as guards, with Roberson at center, and John Brown and Floyd Brown, sharpshooters of uncanny ability, as forwards.

Catholic U. Ringmen Meet Miami Tonight

Kysczewski Fights Cameron in Feature Heavyweight Bout; La Fond Still Sick

Sneeze Kysczewski, Catholic University heavyweight, will have a weight advantage of approximately 40 pounds on Red Cameron, of Miami, when they step into the ring tonight at Brookland in the finale of the boxing match between the schools but the Hurricane star will be the favorite.

Miami arrived early yesterday morning and worked out in the Cardinals' gym later in the afternoon. Coach Billy Regan said his men were in excellent condition and expected to win and he seemed particularly confident that Cameron would get the nod.

"He's ositively the finest collegiate heavyweight I've seen in all my years of boxing," the Miami mentor said last night, "and I think you'll see Kysczewski go down for the full count."

Cameron, who whipped the national intercollegiate champion last week, weighed 188 pounds when he stepped on the Fairbanks yesterday and while Sneeze will come in around 230 pounds neither Cameron nor Regan seemed unduly disturbed.

"He only weighed 184 for Campbell and you should have seen the job he did on that guy," Regan grinned.

Other Miamians were not as fortunate with their weights, however, and more than one spent some time in Trainer Herman Lauritzen's electric cabinet sweating off excessive weight. Francis Christie, 127-pounder, and Jack Larkin, 155 pounds, had the most trouble in this respect.

Coach Eddie LaFond, sent back to bed under doctor's orders after trying to get in at least one day of work with the Cardinals, didn't hit the hay until digging up a light-heavyweight to carry the Cardinal banner against Earl (Tuffy) Sapp. He is Francis Manning, son of an Army officer stationed at Fort Belvoir and LaFond believes he'll show Sapp a trick or two.

Standing Pat

Otherwise the Cardinals are standing pat on the lineup that gained a four-four tie with Lock Haven last week although there is a possibility they may have to forfeit the lightweight joust because of Bernie Kelleny's absence. LaFond isn't sure he won't have a lightweight by the time the first bell rings at 8:30 tonight.

Kysczewski was in fine condition yesterday when he knocked off work after a brief, limbering up session on the bags. Although handicaped by the lack of sparring partners this week the big fellow doesn't think his hitting power has diminished nor his eye dulled and his loyal followers predict that it'll be Cameron who takes the count if Sneeze lands with his right.

Columbus Five, Ringmen See Action Tonight

The Columbus University quintet seeks its eighth victory in ten starts against the Potomac State "Catamounts" tonight at Keyser, W. Va., while the Crimson and Gold boxing team squares off against the Pennsylvania State Teachers College at Lockhaven, Pa.

Coach Ben Kail is starting the five that opened the season against the same opponents on December 17. The line-up will comprise Capt. Gerald Burns and Bob Berry, forwards, Lenny Stanton, center, and Acky Viana and Nick Filiah, guards. The Columbus mentor has used this starting line-up in every game this year.

The Explorers trounced Potomac State in their first game to the tune of 55 to 41, but a much closer contest is anticipated at the West Virginians' home court. Coach Kail expects his boys to take the Potomac State encounter in stride and be ready for the big game with LaSalle College of Philadelphia at McKinley Tech, Monday night.

The Explorers' chances for their first ring victory are enhanced with Charley Cox, co-captain and smashing 165-pounder slated to see action for the first time this season.

Win or lose, however, the Columbus leather-pushers will have brief respite from the fistic wars for Tuesday night they see action again, this time against a colorful and well balanced Miami University ring team, at Turner's Arena.

Bladensburg Wins, Keeps Clean Record

Bladensburg High continued to claim the only undefeated basketball record in this vicinity yesterday following a 33-16 smashing of National Training School at Bladensburg.

In taking their ninth straight triumph the hosts were never threatened, running up a 16-2 margin after one quarter and improving on it as they pleased. It was the Trainers' seventh loss in a row.

Dale Meyers, with ten points, led the victors in scoring and played a polished floor game. N. T. S. split its scoring evenly between four players—Durfee, Hilton, Pierce and O'Brien.

Telephone Net Drops Sharply In December

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday reported December net income of $11,859 as compared with $190,597 in the same 1940 month.

Operating revenues for December were $1,498,272 against $1,209,399 a year ago and operating expenses were $1,218,641 as compared with $841,583 in December, 1940.

Bank Aides Get Extra Pay

The Suburban National Bank, with offices at Takoma Park and Silver Spring, announced yesterday a 5 per cent cost-of-living allowance to officers and employes, effective February 1. The allowance will be subject to change, dependent upon general economic conditions, President Bladen J. Darneille said.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 30 (AP).—Rye and soybeans prices led another upward push of the grain market today, with gains of about 3 cents a bushel, beans selling above $2.06 at a new all-time high, before there was a general retreat.

Many buying of grains that came from processing and consuming interests, as well as professional traders, was inspired largely by upward revision of the Government's figures on parity prices, automatically raising the minimum ceilings which can be imposed on farm products under the Price Control Bill signed by the President. The subsequent reaction followed the President's statement expressing dissatisfaction with provisions of the bill, which would prohibit establishment of ceilings below 110 per cent or parity.

Combination of Events Leads to Traffic Boom For Bus and Trolley Lines in Many Cities

Milwaukee, Jan. 30.—While hitherto strong civilian industries, such as making automobiles, are temporiarly placed on the economic casualty list, some sick industries, such as urban trolley and bus lines, are currently healing their sores.

A combination of curcumtsances is leading to a boom in traffic for urban bus and trolley lines in armament building centers. First, there is the factor of full industrial employment in diversified centers, such as this (Milwaukee). Secondly, the ban on tires is causing car owners voluntarily to reduce their own schedule of car miles to make their automobiles and accessories last longer and be available for emergency needs. Accordingly, men who habitually drove to work are now walking to the bus line or trolley car in increasing numbers. Thirdly, on extremely cold, subzero days, tnis trend is intensified by those who prefer to keep their cars in a protected garage.

Thus, the wartime trend is a reminder that nothing is permanent in life except change.

For several decades it was commonplace to observe that the automobile had made the trolley obsolete.

But current priority restrictions on automobiles and tires are recreating a popular demand for dragging out the old trolley cars.

There is a demand here and in other industrial cities throughout the country for surveying the possibility of adding bus routes to the suburban areas, which hitherto relied on individual transportation through the personal motor car.

Before the year is over, the civilian is likely to be importuned to cut down on his consumption of electric current in order to free units of energy for essential armament production.

In most industrial centers in khaki, one or two turbines have been acquired by the local utilities to take care of the added wartime load, and others are on order.

But the pressure since Pearl Harbor for priorities for the Navy and the Army has sidetracked work in the great electrical plants on such parts for civilion industries.

If additional turbines are not forthcoming, the supply of power may prove a bottleneck in various industrial centers of the Nation.

In such circumstances, the householder will dubtless be asked as a patriotic contribution to use the electric button more sparingly. And even the most forehanded consumer won't be able to protect himself through building up a personal inventory of elgctrical energy.

When Donald M. Nelson surveys the overall situation, it is hoped that he will recognize the importance of releasing materials and specialized manpower to create the turbines for power companies, which will be called upon to meet peak demands for power from factories engaged in producing guns, tanks, planes and ships. In the power age, mechanical power is a major factor, and it would be disastrous to think of it as a nonessential.

If operating utility officials are permitted to advise in rationing power and electric current in communities where this may prove to be necessary, they will first put a ban on outdoor illuminated advertising signs and on floodlights not required for safety purposes. The next step would be to enlist consumers to volunteer to cut down on their use of current. At best, such forbearance cannot cut down the load factor more than 10 or 15 per cent.

Stock-Up Rush In Stores Still At Lively Pace

The Nation's retailers reported this week new seasonal records in dollar volume of business, but also noted signs of slackened demand in several "scarcity" lines, Dun & Bradstreet said yesterday.

The stock-up buying movement had not yet spent its force, said the agency, although it was somewhat diminished from the peak of a week ago.

Compared with a year ago, the increase in total retail trade was estimated at between 18 and 22 per cent above last year.

"Multiple purchasing," the survey said, "still accounted for an abnormal volume of sales in articles which consumers had signaled out as being subject to shortages in the future, quality changes, or price increases.

"Retailers who tended to regard the trend as not only abnormal, but unhealthy had suspended promotional activity on many items and in others had instituted informal rationing schemes.

"Calls for winter clothing continued unusually heavy," the report stated, despite relatively mild weather in many sections. Worsted clothing stocks especially were thinned out.

New York Cotton

New York, Jan. 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt's dissatisfaction with farm provisions of the price control bill touched off sufficient selling of cotton futures to erase a substantial part of morning gains running to 1.10 a bale.

The market closed 10 cents a bale lower to 35 higher.

Early persistent buying by trade and Wall Street interests reflected an advance of 1.20 a bale to 10.10 in the mid-January parity price. Another factor was the report the farm bloc was arguing with Secretary Wickard over the Secretary's outline of his price ideas.

Auto Output In U. S. Comes To Virtual Halt

By David J. Wilkie.
Associated Press Automotive Editor

Detroit, Jan. 30.—Passenger automobile and light truck production for all practical purposes came to an end today.

Even before assembly lines stopped, the Nation's great automotive industry, already producing tanks, aviation engines, bomber plane subassemblies and other military implements, stepped up its tempo on these items, strange to its foundries and assembly plants.

An all-out war economy controls the industry's thinking; a "staggering" volume of arms production in the shortest possible time is its objective.

Conversion Not Simple

Factory heads, confident of attaining this end, admitted the task was no simple one. For more than four decades the industry's principal product has been vehicles for civilian use; it's 1917-18 war work, as one industry leader expressed it, "was nothing compared to what we are in for now."

"We are counting upon our brains, our imagination and our sweat," said one outstanding producer.

"But don't forget," said another, "military products aren't regular products; airplane engines aren't car engines, caterpillar treads aren't wheels; machine gun mountings aren't rumble seats and cannons just aren't windshield wipers."

Few May Continue

For some 200,000 to 250,000 plant workers throughout Michigan and others in widely separated branch assembly plants, the cessation of normal activities meant enforced idleness for an uncertain period.

Some factories sent their last passenger vehicles down the assembly lines today; some will shut down tomorrow and a few will continue into next week. The unfilled part of January's 204,848 unit quota, however, is relatively small.

Propped against the windshield of the last car down one final assembly line today was a placard reading:

"Our last great 1942 car; our tanks and our guns will be great, too; then we'll build great cars again."

Earnings Report

Union Pacific Railroad Co. reported in a preliminary statement for 1941 net income of $28,857,420 after charges and taxes. This was equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $11.19 a share on the common stock. In 1940 net income was $19,445,880, equal to $6.96 a common share.

Mathieson Alkali Works, Inc., reported net income for 1941 of $1,743,628, equal after preferred dividends to $1.90 a common share, compared with $1,587,812 or $1.72 a common share in the preceding year.

Continental Baking Co. and subsidiaries showed net income of $2,861,521 for the year ended December 27, 1941, against a net of $3,500,331 in 1940.

Union Electric Co. of Missouri, perhaps in its last year as a North American subsidiary, reported net earings of $7,186,811 in 1941, equivalent to $2.67 a share on the 2,695,000 shares of common stock outstanding, all owned by the holding pompany. This compared with a net of $6,324,196 in 1940, or $2.76 on 2,295,000 shares of stock then outstanding. North American purchased an additional 400,000 shares last year for 10 million dollars to provide the utility with expansion capital.

Blaw-Knox Co. reported a net profit of $1,668,311 for 1941, after deducting $3,475,737 for income taxes and nonrecurring losses, the net profit was equivalent to $1.25 per share, compared with $1.02 per share in 1940.

Gasoline Use Continues at High Level

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 30.—Informed oil men said today Americans apparently still were riding the Nation's highways in their close to pre-war numbers when there was no Government ban on purchase of new automobile tires.

These sources, explaining actual figures might not be available before mid-February, said early estimates for January indicated no decrease in use of gasoline by motorists.

The ban on new tire purchases became effective shortly after

D. C. Gas Sales Reported Lower

Harry Wainwright, research director of the Gasoline Retailers of Washington, reported yesterday that a local survey showed that gasoline sales in the first two weeks of January were about 5 per cent below those of the same 1940 period. There is every indication that gas consumption in the latter part of January showed a further drop, he said, despite the fact that more autos than ever are rolling over Washington streets.

America's entry into the war less than two months ago.

The supply of petroleum products on hand—gasoline and fuel oil— in the Eastern States, however, dropped slightly for the week ending January 24 below that of the previous week, an unseasonal decline.

Supplies Decrease

The Petroleum Institute of America's figures showed 19,812,000 barrels of all petroleum products in the Eastern area for January 24 as compared with 20,360,000 for the week ending January 17.

Included in the Eastern area are all coastal States from Maine to Florida, half of Pennsylvania and all of New York except the western edge.

Interior Secretary Ickes said yesterday the petroleum situation in the East, where rationing was imposed last summer, was "tight and getting tighter" as a result of ship tanker sinkings and diversion of such vessels to war service.

He noted tank car shipments of petroleum products into Eastern States showed an increase of 86 per cent in the two weeks of January 10 and January 24—which included the period of the tanker sinkings—as a result of efforts to stimulate this method of transportation.

Rail Shipments Off

Some of this increase was reflected in the figures: for the week ending January 17 the daily average shipment of all oil products into the Eastern area by rail was 77,400 barrels; for the week ending January 10 it was 58,725 barrels.

During last summer's Eastern States' oil rationing period the oil companies launched a rail shipment program which at peak was bringing oil into the Eastern States at the rate of 143,000 marrels daily.

This total, however, was a little less than one-tenth the daily demand in the Eastern area.

The rest of that demand was supplied largely by tankers, each one of which can carry oil equal to the combined capacity of about 200 tank cars.

Don't Stop to Count Cost, Nelson Tells N. A. M.

Donald M. Nelson, it was learned yesterday, has told big business in so many words that he wants production, not argument, and "to hell with stopping to count the "cost."

The War Production Board chairman made an unannounced flying trip to New York Thursday night and issued his orders to some 250 ranking members of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Virtually all of the Nation's industries holding major war contracts were represented.

"If any of you men have war contracts pending which are being held up while you negotiate over the terms or while your lawyers are ironing out the details, get into production now and settele the details later," Nelson told the business leaders.

"To hell with stopping to count the cost. Start turning out the stuff and we can argue the terms at our leisure.

"Turn it out by inefficient methods if necessary and figure out better ones as you go along—but get the stuff moving whatever happens."

Nelson's aides said the NAM leaders had suggested the meeting originally as a round table discussion for possibly 20 or 30 persons, but that scores of members demanded that they be permitted to attend.

Nelson emphasized that 1942 was the crucial year in the war production effort and told the manufacturers not to worry about next year until it arrived. One weapon today would be worth two in 1943 and ten in 1944, the WPB chairman declared.

Ickes Replies to 'Grumbling' Oil Producers

Secretary of Interior Ickes declared in a statement addressed to the oil-producing States and petroleum industry yesterday "it is extremely essential, from the standpoint of promoting the war effort," that the oil production rates certified for each producing State "be met by every State without delay."

A source close to the Secretary, who is petroleum coordinator, said the statement resulted from "grumbling" and questions raised in some States on the production quota system which Ickes made effective January 1, as a war measure.

The coordinator's system of certifying production rates was set up in the form of "recommendations" to the producing States and the industry. There now is no law of enforcement back of the recommendations. Ickes' associates declined to discuss what steps might be taken if any State failed to comply with its recommended quota. The coordinator's statement follows:

"The imperative need of assuring the Nation of an adequate, continuous supply of petroleum products for all military and essential civilian requirements on a sustained basis no longer permits the hazard participation by States in supplying the national demand.

"Any State that might persist in exhausting its petroleum resources at an abnormally rapid rate would seriously jeopardize the war program. Premature exhaustion of any one State's resources would only throw an undue burden on the other States at a time when the need for petroleum will be even more critical than now.

"The urgency of the present situation prohibits all considerations save full cooperation in the present national program to attain maximum utilization of the Nation's natural resources—not for the first year of the war alone, nor for the second, but for as long a period as the present conflict may last."

Prior to adoption of the practice of certifying production rates, the various States based their output solely on a forecast of demand issued by the Bureau of Mines.

Ralph K. Davies, deputy petroleum coordinator, explained that the objective of the certification procedure was to provide a sound program whereby each producing State would participate "properly in supplying the total national demand for petroleum."

Deupree Heads Business Advisory Council

R. R. Deupree, Cincinnati soap manufacturer, yesterday was elected chairman of the Business Advisory Council of the Commerce Department.

Deupree, who is president of the Procter & Gamble Co., succeeded William L. Batt, who declined reelection because of his work in the War Production Board.

The council is a voluntary committee of about 60 prominent business and financial leaders, who help the Government get cooperation from business. They serve without pay and give the President confidential reports on business reaction to Governmental problems.

Elected vice chairmen were Ralph Flanders, of Springfield, Vt.; Paul G. Hoffman, of South Bend, Ind.; Arthur Kudner, of New York, and Walter C. Teagle, of New York.

These officers will form the executive committee along with Batt, W. L. Clayton, Carle C. Conway, M

High critical acclaim has greeted a new anthology of radio plays by Norman Corwin, brilliant staff writer-director-producer of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The book, "Thirteen by Corwin" (Henry Holt & Co., $2.75), includes selections from the author's radio series, "26 by Corwin," which was hailed months ago as among the finest writing in broadcasting history.

Carl Van Doren, Pulitzer Prize author, has written an introduction to the book in which he says: "This book is, I think, the richest contribution yet made to the newest form of literature. Though other writers beside Norman Corwin have written plays to be broadcast on the air, and good ones, he stands out as an accomplished acknowledged master. He is to American radio what Marlowe was to the Elizabethan stage."

The thirteen plays included in the new book have been presented one or more times over C. B. S. and WJSV in the last three years. They are: "The Odyssey of Runyon Jones." "Radio Primer," They Fly Through the Air With the Greatest of Ease," The Plot to Overthrow Christmas," "Daybreak," "Old Salt," "A Solliloquy to Balance the Budget," "Ann Rutledge," "Seems Radio Is Here to Stay," "To Tim at Twenty," "My Client Curley," "Appointment" and "The Oracle of Philadelphi."

With each of the 13 plays, Corwin has included suggestions for casting, acting, sound-effects and rehearsal routine. He also gives a brief C. B. S. broadcast history of each play.

Contract Bridge

Today we offer two problems; solving them satisfactorily will give you an inkling as to whether you are approaching the championship level.

1. With North-South vulnerable, you are sitting East and hold these cards:

♠ A Q 7 6
◇ K 8 7 3
♣ 9 7 6 5

The bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	2 ♣	?

What call do you make?

2 Sitting West, you hold these cards:

♠ A 8 5
♡ J 10 5 3
◇ None
♣ A Q 7 5 3 2

The bidding has gone:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

Answers to Quiz

1. With the opponents vulnerable, a penalty double in this situation may be very profitable if North has five or six clubs and not much else. Of course, he may hold a very long trump suit, but in that case West will probably also have a distributional hand and thus may decide to take out the double. This will undoubtedly be East's only chance to double and he would be wise to take advantage of the opportunity.

2. Although West has a rebiddable club suit, his hand looks too weak for a five-club contract and so his best strategy is immediately to bid two spades. Three spades, including the ace, are adequate trump support and give West's hand ruffing power at a spade contract because of the void in diamonds.

Halifax to Retire When Affairs Permit

London (Saturday), Jan. 31 (INS).—Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, has asked to be allowed to retire when circumstances permit, Columnist Bill Greig wrote today in the Daily Mirror.

Under the new joint supply control, Greig said, the Ambassador's duties have been considerably reduced, so Prime Minister Churchill probably will release Halifax, who wants to retire in order to write.

Sir Alfred Duff-Cooper, former coordinator in the Far East, recently recalled to London, has been talked about as Halifax's successor, said Greig, but the foreign office is pressing for a professional diplomat to take over the important Washington post.

Lewis' Critics Called 'Petty'

The United Mine Workers Journal, organ of John L. Lewis, former president of the C. I. O., yesterday charged that Lewis' detractors blocked his proposal for labor peace because of "petty hatreds," and predicted that the present Victory Labor Board would prove ineffective and give way to a "more practical application of peace and unity in the labor movement."

This statement was regarded as Lewis' answer to the sidetracking of his labor-peace plan for the President's proposal of a joint A. F. of L.-C. I. O. six-man board with the President acting as a seventh member in the event of disagreement.

Lewis' peace proposal was originally advanced "as a result of the mismanagement of our wartime effort which the House and Senate investigating committees have already reported to the American public," the mine leader's publication said.

It was advanced in the belief that labor might be blamed for production failures as "inefficiencies multiplied" and as "incapable management was entrusted with enlarged duties," the publication stated in a leading article on the failure of Lewis' peace proposal.

The President's proposal was characterized as an idea "from out of the clouds" which would not work because the committee set up has only advisory power. Besides, President Roosevelt would not have the time to devote to the board, it said.

Explaining Lewis' failure to resume the peace negotiations he broke off in April, 1939, until he advanced his recently rejected proposal, the magazine asserted that Lewis now felt that the C. I. O.'s future was secure and that it could bargain on equal terms with the A. F. of L. without fear of dismemberment.
